Roy. I appreciate your point and I'm sorry for disturbing the newsgroup. It won't happen again, I promise. I'm glad we have RRAA because I had antenna questions they couldn't answer over in rec.radio.cb

Does one long continuous wave(CW) make your antenna warm in the winter?

What kind of antenna do you use to receive CW, a vertical co-linear ground-plane or some form of half-wave Dipole? What's Best?

Does antenna polarization matter if the CW is high speed and received with a computer?

A lot of hams now are Appliance Operators and hate CW, how can they keep CW of their antennas?

I heard like if you hook the coax to your dipole antenna in reverse, CW comes out backwards, Like POTS would come out as STOP. Is that true?

Thanks Roy, keep up the good work! You're doing a good job. 73

Paul,
Ignore Mark Morgan, he ain't playing with a full deck.

It's not off-topic for any radio group. I'm hoping to make this group respectable again, and you can help. If K3LT would would come back and other past RRAP CW supporters, we can kick out the anti-CW Homophiles like Woger, Mark & Lloyd, and make this group respectable again. I'd even get rid of SC and start using my callsign here again once the trash is taken out.

What a Loon! In one thread you think I'm Todd, and in this thread you think I'm Lloyd. You're as confused as Mark and just as stupid. Maybe that's why you two get along so well with each other.

[perhaps that is 'Ravensbruck' instead of 'Ragensbruck'...but the exactness of location spelling pales in light of the horror and inhumanity of the slaughter of over 6 million]

>I am a jew and lost much of the extended family but realy I wish that

It has happened constantly since 1945, Mark.

BTW, did you notice Jimmy's EXACTNESS in everything? That's rather in line with the old stereotype of German EXACTNESS.
[I have a good 35mm camera made in Germany tradenamed the "Exacta"...:-)]

Perhaps he thinks this forum is kind of an old War Crimes trial? Anyone who he feels is against morse code is thus a "war criminal" who deserves punishment? It certainly has that air around it.

I'm not a Jew (actually a 'realized' Lutheran once I came of adult age) but I've been in (sometimes intimate) contact with Jews for most of my life. I can't understand any of the bigoted HATE that some feel against Jews...for hundreds of years on up to present time. Senseless.

The old camps of Auschwitz, Bergen-Belsin, etc., are no longer, just some unused memorials to the Holocaust and the horrible slaughter of millions of innocents. But, some of the Morseodists in here demand "work" on morse code skills so one can be "free" to use the ham bands.
They are unmindfull of the phrase above the entrance of Auschwitz, "Arbeit Macht Frei" (Work Makes <you> Free).
Interesting parallel, don't you think?

>> BTW, Jimmy, another Len taught me those terms (surname >> Deighton) and I looked them up. Had to, my training was >> in the US Army. Which branch did you serve in, Jimmy?

Jimmy "served in other ways," 'ways' he hasn't explained.
[just another old, dead horse but it was felt that he ought to 'sniff' on that carcass, one he hasn't beaten]

>> Call for ETHNIC PURITY in the newsgroup! Banish all >> no-coders! Keep the group CLEAN for the beloved use of >sorry Coection it is a Religois matter not an ethinic one

Well, that's a philosophical point of view and I will dispute that it is more ethnicity than religion. To hear some of thsee amateur morsemen carry on, they come across as having their entire lives destined for morsemanship.
It is like they are of the Morseodist 'race."

>> If a single no-code-test advocate makes a "mistake," >> banish them from this group for life! Ethnic cleansing!
>even f they don't make a msitake they are to be bannished for life >or threatened wit Murder

That kind of reinforces my consideration of the 'ethnic' cause.

Well, maybe its just an "Ethic" cause. But, if so, that would tie it directly to "Morals" and "Morality" [all radio ops of this new millennium 'should' learn manual telegraphy skills or they are stupid, lazy, incapable of learning according to anony-mousie Blowcode]

So, if it is "Ethic" rather than "Ethnic" then it would not be that much different. Maybe one could say that the manual telegraphy fedajin are "born again jihadists?" :-)

More than once you have been desired to be killed, Mark. It's all in Google archives. So, the 'All-Code-Ah' who decry "violence" are silent about that, claiming "they don't read that" (therefore it doesn't exist).

Jimmy got all hot and bothered about my phrase that "some 1x2s need to be hit with a 2x4" in order to see the light. Now, I did NOT clarify what a "2x4" was any more than a "1x2" was. Both terms apply to lumber and will be understood at any lumberyard in the country...as applying to lumber. Jimmy thought it was something else...which is suspiciously AS IF he had either fear or guilt feelings. Not my worry. Jimmy only seems to know one thing: Amateur radiotelegraphy. Since he has a "one-by-two" callsign, his ego prompted him to think it was meant for HIM! :-)

Jimmy has this "thing" for necrophilia. Very strange. It may be that it isn't directly related to necrophilia, just that he cannot possibly think of himself or any bit of his writing as EVER "wrong." No sir, not HIM. He "must" trot out old, stale, trite newsgroup arguments and try (vainly) to put down his "opponents."

I will have to find Pastor Niemuller's famous poem (exact quote, of course) and be ready to use that. You know, the one where "...at first they came for the ##### and I didn't do anything..." etc. I don't remember it word for word but the intent of the words, the gestalt of the poem, is obvious.

It's a plain and simple fact that this newsgroup has long amateur radio callsign-holding "men!"

Paul, face the cold, hard, cruel facts. This newsgroup has

There were things done by the ARRL which were a clear misuse of power...in order to insure membership growth. They had serious attempts to hide it under the patriotic bunting of a "representative of amateur radio."

Of course the membership only got so far and remains at less than a quarter of all licensed US radio amateurs.

"RMN" failed to get elected as California's Governor.

Yes, the amateur radio code test has now dropped to 5 wpm for all license classes.

Is your "amateur radio security" threatened?

In amateur radio there is NO equality...to get privileges operating below 30 MHz, one must still take a manual telegraphy test...even though the FCC as long since dropped any mandatory manual radiotelegraphy operation.

I'm sorry if you were insulted, Hans - that was not my intent.

My point was simply that certain people and industries are paid by the government rather than the free market. The government decides that something needs to be done for the public good, and that user fees can't pay for it, so taxpayer money pays for it.

That covers a lot more than members of the Armed Forces - there are firemen, law enforcement officers, public education teachers and administrators, all manner of public works people, etc. There are also many private companies that would not exist, or would be much smaller, if the government did not buy their products and services.

For example, when Hoover Dam was built in the 1930s, the government used taxpayer money to pay the contractors that built the dam. Private industry could not do the job alone - the cost was too high and the short-term return on investment too low.

Once the dam was built, it provided inexpensive electricity and water, and created an artificial lake. Which spurred development in the region.

Those who worked on the dam - including those who died or were injured building it - certainly earned their pay.

Is it "insulting bullshit" to say that that part of the country had its development subsidized by the government when Hoover Dam was built? If so, how should it be described?

There's a lot of things you don't know eithr, Len.

Besides, what does his behavior have to do with yours?

IOW, rather than discuss the issue itself in a civil manner, you'll attack their work, gender, ethnicity, education, and anything else you can find out about them. Even if they don't do the same to you.

In what way, Len? Are you more concerned with looks than performance?
Seems that way.

by the way, the main tuning capacitor in that receiver came from an ARC-5 transmitter. I machined the tuning knob adapter and the dial drum extension.

their Social Security benefits will exceed the money they contributed in Social Security taxes - including interest. Isn't that "free money"?

I don't submit to your "brainwashing" and I don't accept your smug, arrogant, illogical, invalid, dictatorial denigrations. Nor do I reply in kind to you.

I also don't use the actions of others as an excuse for my own towards a third party. I don't assign "group guilt" to all nocodetest advocates.

Same thing.

Len, be a good sport about these posts. You usually lose the arguments because your logic and facts are faulty. Be gracious and accept your losses. Try not to rationalize that you won them.

Boy, you sure do get off-topic, Len.

The word should be "it's", Len.

"Its" is the possessive form of "it",

"It's" is the contraction of "it is".

That's basic English. Grade schoolers know that one. A self-proclaimed professional writer should know it, too.

To me it's a mixed bag...

It's definitely good news that such an offender has been taken off the air and received serious penalties.

But it's less-than-good news that it took so long for it to happen. The deliberate and malicious interference to amateurs was going on for years, and was extensively documented and reported. The interference to other radio services was, IMO, the last straw - but even those incidents weren't recent. Perhaps the FCC and law enforcement proceeded as slowly and carefully as they did in order to build an absolutely air-tight case, with stiff penalties and a clear precedent. I hope that is the case.

It's also less-than-good news that the offender was a licensed radio amateur. While we all know that he's a rare case, and that the efforts of other radio amateurs were a big part of getting him convicted, the general image to the public may be less clear. We need good publicity for amateur radio, not 'Radio Ham Runs Amok On The Air, Interferes With Army and Police' headlines. (not an actual headline, but you see the point).

How do we deal with similar cases in the future?

You should make yourself clear, Roger. You don't refer to the Ray who is in a wheelchair, the fellow you poked fun at a week or so ago. You are directing your latest sick comment toward Ray N8FQN, former Marshall County EC, who died this week. Does the idea of someone having oral sex with a corpse appeal to you? Is that the kind of thing you think about frequently? You should be careful, Rog, you could end up in that rubber room if it becomes apparent that you could do harm to yourself or others.

You certainly seem to know a lot about Roger for one who claims he isn't Roger Wiseman. Did your pal approach the owner of the house and ask,
"Is there a web cam in your house aimed at my house?"

Is that when you thought Stagger Lee was Lloyd or Ray Chason or is it when you believed that he was me and that I'd confuse a Marshall County, Alabama web site for one in the county in which I live?

I live in Marshall County, West Virginia, Roger. I belong to Marshall County, West Virginia ARES. Is it really your contention that I wouldn't know the difference between the web page of an Alabama group and the one to which I belong? You've gone over the edge, UnWiseman.

There are two webcams involved, and they both are pointed in directions which show the street in front of your house and the alley behind your house, as well as your garage and parts of your house. Apparently, one of your neighbors has security cameras watching the alley and the entrances to his house, and he forgot to secure the little web servers which are built right into those cameras. As a result, anyone can use a web browser to view your garage and parts of your house.

Security webcams are very common these days, and are even sold by Walmart. See for example

http://www.walmart.com/catalog/product.do?product_id=4012427

if you want to buy your own webcam. You could then point it at your neighbor's house to get back at him.

Thanks, DeLorean. I'll forever wonder how you people found out about those unsecured webcams.

Tsk, you were trying to insult me, not Hans.

No real problem to me since I know your kind of "my body is Rationalization and trying to weasel out of what you insultingly

More rationalization. You were not in law enforcement or other public safety service.

You DO play the angry Mother Superior in here, though...you must think that counts?

What IS insulting bullshit is your elitist NON-SERVING crap about members of the armed forces of the United States being "subsidized" by taxpayers.

Now check out your "people skills" by going into the nearest military base or VFW hall or a military recruiting station and repeat your "insulting bullshit" to the veterans there.

well Given my Knowledge of the SS and senoir NZI's and Something called Astara and the way it got twisted around so many of the very senoir NAZI's I can form a ration if very sick theory as to Holocost itself was carried out, and some of behind the eirlier progroms starts to emerge from the realm of insanity to the fringes of rationality but it tok the study that result in my Master degree on yzatin Studies and a detailed know of that empire and its therocratic state concept to begin to wrap my brain around it

You're really torturing my words into a misquote here. What I said to you in private E-mail (circa-2004) was something to the effect of the newsgroups are more enjoyable when there is a fair and respectful exchange of ideas. So, could I "enjoy" this forum? Yes, but not in its present state.

My exact message is archived off to backups. I can find it and post it here if you want, otherwise feel free to post your copy of my E-mail.

I'm not Steve Robeson. I'm happy to clarify that for you.

As I noted in my previous followup, I was speaking to a wider audience, some of whom expressed their agreement with me in further followups.

If words are useless in this forum, why do you continue to contribute many, many such words?

>>I take the subjects of amateur radio and amateur radio policy seriously.

Not that you would ever stereotype, or overgeneralize the actions of a few (and it truly is a very few) to a much larger population.

>>Furthermore, no one should have to remain silent just to meet some

I was referring to Herb's admonishment that if I can't follow some sort of strict protocol like that allegedly practiced by Dave Heil, then I should just remain silent. I found his "standards of newsgroup righteousness" to be arbitrary, and said so. Since Dave Heil has now followed up to state that he agrees with me, this further suggests that Herb was talking through his hat.

Under what other circumstances do you feel that I have failed to grasp that we have problem users, trolls, etc., on this newsgroup? Please be specific.

>>I know Dave Heil. I respect Dave Heil. I don't need to be a clone of >>Dave Heil to express an opinion in this forum.

> Tsk. A paraphrase of a Senator who lost an election is a > poor choice of words...

Actually, I believe both the late Senator and I were borrowing from the rich heritage of the English language, including using iambic pacing and short declarative sentences to build to a climactic finish, a technique dating at least back to Shakespeare (e.g., "Friends! Romans! Countrymen!" etc.).

Nevertheless, if you feel that I owe some credit to the Senator for my wording above, I don't think it's fair to conclude that he was unsuccessful, and thus not worth paraphrasing, because he ran in an election that was substantially not his to lose (Hint: It was arguably more the responsibility of the individual at the top of the ticket.) Many would credit his statement as underscoring a specific perceived weakness in the opposing ticket, one that arguably was successfully exploited in his party's 1992 victory.

In addition to serving 4 terms as Senator, including re-election to the office at the same time his running-mate for the other election lost, his nomination to be Secretary of the Treasury was voted out of the confirmation committee by acclimation (and standing applause). After his death, following a long life and career, no one seems to have anything bad to say about him. Except, apparently, you.

>>Nor does he need to be a clone of me.

> Now THAT is ripe for discussion! [but, I digress...]

For such a meaningless forum, where words have no effect, you have an awful lot of words, and time to create those words. I've asked this before, and will do so again now. What is the end-goal of your continuing participation here?

Please be assured that there are ongoing plans to develop a better (read: "Moderated") forum for amateur radio policy here on Usenet. As I've gone on record in this newsgroup previously, watch for an announcement sometime this fall.

Not necessary. :-)

You are not the "prosecution" nor am I the "defense" (or

I am happy that you are happy.

I am NOT happy that some are acting as military veteran imposters.

What "wider audience?" Is this a broadcast to many newsgroups?

Because I can! :-) Outside of FCC Comments and Petitions, there are very few UNBIASED venues for speaking one's mind on any amateur radio policy issues.

I do not have to "stereotype, or overgeneralize" anything by such individuals (trolls, misfits, anonymous cowards, and identifiable amateur radio callsign-holding "men").

THEY mark themselves.

Yes, there are only a very few "representatives" of a "much larger population" (of radio amateurs) in here. But, those that do put themselves on public view do not always reflect well on a pleasureable radio activity hobby enjoyed by thousands. Rather they reflect mostly personal preferrences within their hobby. "Objective" applies to little of what is written.

Whose? Try to be clear on which person you are referring to.

Heil's subsequent postings are not what he "agreed to" so that indicates a lot of this "talking through the hat."

I do not use hats.

How can one be "specific" on NO ACTION?

"action." It is stupid self-aggrandizement.

Nice rationalization. Just the same, Senator Lloyd Bentsen lost that 1988 election to Senator Dan Quayle. Bentsen's words became a catch-phrase in contemporary American language after that famous debate. It was in all the newspapers.

>... After >his death, following a long life and career, no one seems to have

I said nothing deragatory about late Senator Bentsen. What I remarked on was YOUR choice of words, Paul.

I can truthfully say that I never knew John Kennedy. I respected John Kennedy. I did not need to be a political candidate to go out and help with John Kennedy's election. That was 28 years before the Bentsen-Quayle TV debates. Now that has little to do with the subject at hand, just as a quick biography of Lloyd Bentsen that you thought necessary has nothing to do with YOUR words here. [it is not Shakespeare but then such is not found in here...nor is it necessary]

>For such a meaningless forum, where words have no effect, you have an >awful lot of words, and time to create those words. I've asked this

It is as I've stated many years ago, "to advocate the elimination of the manual morse code test in US amateur radio licensing. When that elimination happens, I will leave this newsgroup."

Does that satisfy your honor? [your majesty? your worship?]

Many, many, far too many words have been written by others in trying to ascribe ulterior motives to my posting in here. All of those other attributed "motives" were simply false. Are you going to believe my words or the words of others on my "motives?" I think it is a safe bet that you will believe only those others.

What is the "end-goal" of YOUR 'continuing' (sparse, random) participation in here?

>Please be assured that there are ongoing plans to develop a better

I'm sure we will all look forward to an OBJECTIVELY moderated newsgroup. Whether or not such OBJECTIVITY occurs is another matter. It is a safe bet that such "moderation" will be as subjective as all the olde-tyme morsemen can wish for.

I suspect it will be better than that after all Paul does know he can't

You didn't answer the question.

Two bus drivers have been in here; one left and one died.

>Couldn't stay with any of them for too long, huh?

Is there something wrong with job-hopping, Jimmy?

Since you haven't been in the aerospace business, you don't understand that layoffs happen.

>That's the point - if someone is a procodetest person, anything they do

Incorrect.

>Then why did you criticize their work? Why is it even an issue?

I can't criticize your work. You never say what it is.

>There's a lot of things you don't know eithr, Len.

You've inhaled too much "eithr," Jimmy. :-)

>Besides, what does his behavior have to do with yours?

What does your behavior have to do with Nursie?

Your behavior is similar to his and you condone his postings.

>You seem to be saying that since one person allegedly did what you >describe, it somehow justifies your behavior.

Unlike yourself, I don't "justify" my behavior by rationalizing
it three ways from Sunday to fit the olde-tyme morsemen's devotion to the Church of St. Hiram..

You ASSUME the role of "critic" yet are with many faults.

>That's faulty logic on your part.

No. You dislike my comments and opinions, label them
FALSELY as "faulty" when you are NOT the supreme critic.

>IOW, rather than discuss the issue itself in a civil manner, you'll

That's faulty logic on your part.

>What about your self-righteous stance on eliminating the Morse Code >test?

Nothing "self-righteous" about it. Elimination of the code test is a LOGICAL thing for the FCC to do.

1. The FCC is under NO mandate by international radio regulations to keep the amateur radio license code test. It is the FCC's option to keep or eliminate.

2. The FCC has not required all US radio amateurs to operate manual radiotelegraphy for years over and above any other allocated mode. Yet, there are NO manual skill tests for operating any other allocated modes. All allocated modes are optional to use.

3. NO other US radio service uses manual radiotelegraphy
for regular communications, therefore there is NO
"pool of trained (telegraphy) operators" necessary
for any national need.

Those are all supremely LOGICAL statements, all true.
Nothing "self-righteous" about them.

On the other hand, the truly self-righteous are the oldetyme radio amateurs who slavishly follow the dictates of the ARRL (a minority group NOT "representing" all amateurs) and their own emotions ("I had to take a code test so everyone else must"...forever).

>Yet you go all Godwin when someone criticizes you, Len.

I go with God, not some "godwin."

You've never served the United States of America as any military service member, are NOT in the government, yet you defend your HOBBY of amateur radio as "being a service to the nation?"

Your logic there is so faulty that John Cleese couldn't even satirize it.

Apparently you think that advocacy of eliminating the code test is "un-American?!?"

Tsk on me, bad sentence structure. :-)

Your "note's" last sentence indicates you "lent it to your brother" in 1976. He "used it for 'several years' but "sometime in the 1980s it was stored in an attic." After that it was disassembled.

So, you did not have it for your use after 1976. 1976 is thirty years ago.

Your brother is Thomas Miccolis, WA3UZI, lives in the state of Maryland.

You have posted NO "performance" figures for that 32-year-old version of an HBR. That it "works good" is highly subjective and not quantifiable.

You are "proud" of doing nothing.

You just did what you said you don't do! :-)

What "guilt" do you think no-code-test advocates have?

>It's not about "courage".

Did you have the courage to serve your country?

>Len, be a good sport about these posts.

I try to be. :-)

But...Mother Superior shows up with her spanking ruler and says:

>You usually lose the arguments >because your logic and facts are faulty.

Tsk, Mother Superior deserves to be ruler-spanked herself for making THAT statement! :-)

>Be gracious and accept your losses.

What "losses," Jimmy? :-)

>Try not to rationalize that you won them.

I "rationalize?!?" :-)

I point out your own rationalization, excuses, and general behavior consistent with morsemanship brainwashing by the League. It is obvious, but you act as if you have NO faults! :-)

"A self-proclaimed professional writer should know it, too."

"Professional" means getting paid for work.

There is NO pay or monetary compensation for writing in here...or showing where you are false and misleading (more of a recreational activity for me).

Replies to your postings just "write themselves."

NO writer can "self-proclaim" a by-line printed by a publication in thousands of copies of an edition.

Mother Superior should change her habit. Quit trying to be the cross-dresser, Jimmy.

Go get laid. It will take your mind off cross-dressing.
As I said, I'm not homophobic and don't care whether it is with a boyfriend or girlfriend.

"Beheading?" Hardly. Perhaps doing-in some no-code-test advocate as was done to William Wallace of Scotland long ago:
"Quartering" with all parts buried in different locations. :-)

It will probably be a la the ARRL "sinning by omission." A simple deletion and ignoring of any non-MMM poster. That way only ONE way or viewpoint is visible to the public. The public will then assume that the MMM view prevails. No problem...

The FCC regulates US amateur radio, not the "participants" in it.
Some "participants" think they rule, but they don't.

"Give a ham an inch and they think they are rulers!" :-)

What Jim doesn't realized is that the blood of service men and women subsidize his freedom.

3606. 30 helpful hints for No-Code hams like Markie & two test Woger.

The 30 Steps below will help all No-Code Hams, it will also help you to find others just like yourself. These 30 steps should also be added to the present writtens.

Step One: Use as many "Q" signals as possible. Yes, I know they were invented solely for CW and are totally inappropriate for two meter FM, but they are fun and entertaining. They keep people guessing as to what you really meant. I.E. "I'm going to QSY to the phone." Can you really change frequencies to the phone? QSL used to mean, "I am acknowledging receipt", but now it appears to mean, "yes" or "OK". I guess I missed it when the ARRL changed the meaning. It is also best to use "OK" and "QSL" together. Redundancy is the better part of Lid-dom.

Step Two: Never laugh when you can say "HI HI". No one will ever know you aren't a long time CW rag-chewer if you don't tell them. They'll think you've been on since the days of Marconi.

Step Three: Utilize an alternative vocabulary. Use words like "destinated" and "negatory". It's OK to make up your own words here. I.E. "Yeah Tom, I "pheelbart zaphonix" occasionally myself."

Step Four: Always say "XX4XXX" (Insert your own call) "for I.D." As mentioned in Step One, anything that creates redundancy is always encouraged. That's why we have the Department of Redundancy Department. (Please note that you can follow your call with "for identification purposes" instead of "for I.D." While taking longer to say, it is worth more "LID points".

Step Five: The better the copy on two meter FM, the more you should use phonetics. Names should be especially used if they are short or common ones. I.E. "My name is Al... Alpha Lima" or "Jack.. Juliet Alpha Charlie Kilo." If at all possible use the less common HF phonetics "A4SM... America, Number Four, Sugar Mexico." And for maximum "LID points", make up unintelligible phonetics. "My name is Bob... Billibong Oregano Bumperpool."

Step Six: Always give the calls of yourself and everyone who is (or has been) in the group, whether they are still there or not. While this has been unnecessary for years, it is still a great memory test. You may also use "and the group" if you are an "old timer" or just have a bad memory. Extra points for saying everyone's call and then clearing in a silly way "K2PKK, Chow, Chow."

Step Seven: Whenever possible, use the wrong terminology. It keeps people guessing. Use "modulation" when you mean "deviation", and vice-versa.

Step Eight: If someone asks for a break, always finish your turn, taking as long as possible before turning it over. Whenever possible, pass it around a few times first. This will discourage the breaker, and if it is an emergency, encourage him to switch to another repeater and not bother you.

Step Nine: Always ask involved questions of the person who is trying to sign out. Never let him get by with just a "yes" or "no" answer. Make it a question that will take him a long time to answer.

Step Ten: The less you know on a subject, the more you should speculate about it in the roundtable. Also the amount of time you spend on the subject should be inversely proportionate to your knowledge of the subject even though you have no damn clue.

Step Eleven: Always make sure you try to communicate with only a handheld and a rubber duck antenna. Also, make sure you work through a repeater that you can hear very well, but it cannot hear you. This will put out a kind of "LID mating call": "Well, Joe, I can hear the repeater just fine here. I wonder why it can't hear me?" You will score maximum LID points if you are mobile, and with the radio lying in the passenger seat.

Step Twelve: If you hear two amateurs start a conversation, wait until they are twenty seconds into their contact, and then break in to make a call, or better yet to use the auto-patch. Make sure you keep the repeater tied up for at least three minutes. This way, once the two have re-established contact, they won't even remember what they were talking about.

Step Thirteen: You hear someone on the repeater giving directions to a visiting amateur. Even if the directions are good, make sure you break in with your own "alternate route but better way to get there" version. This is most effective with several other "would-be LIDs", each giving a different route. By the time the visiting amateur unscrambles all the street names whizzing by in his mind, he should have moved out of the range of the repeater. This keeps you from having to stick around to help the guy get back out of town, later.

Step Fourteen: If an annoying station is bothering you, make sure your other "LID" buddies have a "coded" frequency list. Even though "CODES" are strictly forbidden on Amateur Radio, it's really neat to practice "James Bond" tactics.

Step Fifteen: Always use the National Calling Frequency for general conversations. The more uninteresting, the longer you should use it. Extra points are awarded if you have recently move from an adjacent frequency for no reason. Make sure when DX is "rolling" in on 52.525 that you hang out there and talk to your friends five miles down the road about the good old CB days!

Step Sixteen: Make sure that if you have a personal problem with someone, you should voice your opinion in a public forum, especially a net. Make sure you give their name, call, and any other identifying remarks. For maximum points, make sure the person in question is not on the repeater, or not available.

Step Seventeen: Make sure you say the first few words of each transmission twice, especially if it is the same thing each time. Like "roger, roger" or "fine business, fine business". I cannot stress enough about encouraging redundancy.

Step Eighteen: If you hear a conversation on a local repeater, break in and ask how each station is receiving you. Of course they will only see the signal of the repeater you are using, but it's that magic moment when you can find a fellow "LID", and get the report. Extra points are awarded if you are using a base station, and the repeater is less than twenty-five air miles from you.

Step Nineteen: Use the repeater for an hour or two at a time, preventing others from using it. Better yet, do it on a daily basis. Your quest is to make people so sick of hearing your voice every time they turn on their radio, they'll move to another frequency. This way you'll lighten the load on the repeater, leaving even more time for you to talk on it.

Step Twenty: See just how much flutter you can generate by operating at handheld power levels too far away from the repeater. Engage people in conversations when you know they wont be able to copy half of what your saying. Even when they say your uncopyable, continue to string them along by making further transmissions. See just how frustrated you can make the other amateur before he finally signs off in disgust.

Step Twenty One: Use lots of radio jargon. After all, it makes you feel important using words ordinary people don't say. Who cares if it makes you sound like you just fell off Channel 19 on the citizen's Band? Use phrases such as "Roger on that", "10-4", "I'm on the side", "Your making the trip" and "Negatory on that".

Step Twenty Two: Use excessive microphone gain. See just how loud you can make your audio. Make sure the audio gain is so high that other amateurs can hear any bugs crawling on your floor. If mobile, make sure the wind noise is loud enough that others have to strain to pick your words out from all the racket.

Step Twenty Three: Start every transmission with the word "Roger" or "QSL". Sure, you don't need to acknowledge that you received the other transmission in full. After all, you would simply ask for a repeat if you missed something. But consider it your gift to the other amateur to give him solace every few seconds that his transmissions are being received.

Step Twenty Four: When looking for a contact on a repeater, always say your "listening" or "monitoring" multiple times. I've always found that at least a half dozen times or so is good. Repeating your multiple "listening" ID's every 10 to 15 seconds is even better. Those people who didn't want to talk to you will eventually call you, hoping you'll go away after you have finally made a contact.

Step Twenty Five: Always use a repeater, even if you can work the other station easily on simplex ... especially if you can make the contact on simplex. The coverage of the repeater you use should be inversely proportional to your distance from the other station.

Step Twenty Six: When on repeaters using courtesy tones, you should always say "over". Courtesy tones are designed to let everyone know when you have unkeyed but don't let that stop you. Say "over", "back to you" or "go ahead". It serves no useful purpose but don't worry, it's still fun!

Step Twenty Seven: Use the repeater's autopatch for frivolous routine calls... especially during morning or evening commute times. While pulling into the neighborhood, call home to let them know you'll be there in two minutes.... or, call your spouse to complain about the bad day you had at work. After all, the club has "measured rate" service on their phone line so they get charged for each autopatch call. Your endeavor is to make so many patches in a year that you cost the club at least $20 in phone bills. That way you'll feel you got your money's worth for your dues!

Step Twenty Eight: Never say "My name is ....." It makes you sound human. If at all possible, use one of the following phrases: a) "The personal here is ..." b) "The handle here is..."

Step Twenty Nine: Use "73" and "88" incorrectly. Both are already considered plural, but add a "s" to the end anyway. Say "73's" or "88's". Who cares if it means "best regards" and "love and kisses." Better yet, say "seventy thirds"! (By the way, seventy thirds equals about 23.3).

Step Thirty: If the repeater is off the air for service, complain about the fact that it was off the air as soon as it's turned back on. Act as though your entire day has been ruined because the repeater wasn't available when you wanted to use it. Even thought you have never paid a penny to help out with the upkeep of it.

3607. Here are the new band designations & modes after FCC R & O comes out.

Here is a list of the band designations and allowable modes after the FCC Report and Order comes out eliminating the Code Requirement.

Note: This bandplan has been endorsed by the C.B.R.L., Citizen Band Relay League, 225 Main Street, Newington CT.

Band Frequency Allowable
Range(MHz) Emmissions

CB-160 1.8 - 2.0 Splatter Mode, Echo-mics o.k.
CB-80 3.5 - 4.0 Belching & Farting permitted on 3.950
CB-40 7.0 - 7.3 Splatter mode, 7.2 echo-mic calling freq.
CB-20 14.0 - 13.35 Jamming modes permitted on 14.313
CB-15 21.0 - 21.45 Noise Toys & Roger beeps ok below 21.250
CB-11 27.185 National New Ham calling frequency.
CB-10 28.0 - 29.7 Tweak your CB a bit more and you're there!
CB-02 144 - 148 Farting and repeater kerchunking.

Profanity, insults, and Cursing are permitted if phrases like "Old Extra licensee" or "Morse Code" are used in the same sentence.

Discussions of a technical nature are rarely heard and prohibited anyway.

27.185 MHz is also the prefered frequency for new hams to let out a mating call.

Ten Codes are prefered for brevity.

See ya on the new Bands!

You don't answer all of my questions, Len. Why should I answer all of yours?

Both are missed.

IIRC, one of Larry Roll's duties was transporting senior citizens and disabled people who couldn't drive. His work made it possible for them to have much more mobility and independence.

Well, almost anything they do or say is insulted by you.

Who is "Nursie", Len?

I call 'em as I see 'em, Len. You write things that are simply not true, then get mad when someone points out your errors.

No, it's an accurate observation of how you behave when confronted by someone who disagrees with you.

Sure there is.

Not really.

IOW, the FCC can eliminate - or increase - Morse Code testing in almost any way they choose.

That's not a reason to change it.

> 2. The FCC has not required all US radio amateurs to > operate manual radiotelegraphy for years over and > above any other allocated mode.

For more than 50 years, the FCC has not required amateurs to operate using any particular mode, band, or technology. In fact, the FCC has not required amateurs to operate at all in order to retain their licenses.

That's not a reason to change the license tests.

> Yet, there are NO
> manual skill tests for operating any other allocated > modes.

That's because the other modes use skills almost all operators have.

Again, that's not a reason to change the license tests.

> All allocated modes are optional to use.

So are all allocated bands, and technologies. There is no requirement that amateurs any particular band, mode, or technology. Yet the testing for a license includes many questions on things which are totally optional.

For example, a prospective radio amateur who wishes to operate low power Morse Code on 7010 kHz must pass written tests that include questions on solid state electronics, band limits other than 40 meters, RF exposure, VHF/UHF, FM, SSB, data modes, and a long list of other subjects which have nothing to do with the intended operation.

> 3. NO other US radio service uses manual radiotelegraphy
> for regular communications, therefore there is NO
> "pool of trained (telegraphy) operators" necessary

However, manual radiotelegraphy in the form of Morse Code is used extensively in the Amateur Radio service. Having at least a basic skill level in Morse Code is part of being a qualified Amateur Radio operator.

An Amateur Radio license is for operating an Amateur Radio station in accordance with the rules and regulations for Amateur Radio - not other radio services. It therefore makes sense that the requirements for an Amateur Radio license should reflect what radio amateurs actually do.
> Those are all supremely LOGICAL statements, all true.

They are not adequate reasons to change the license test requirements, though.

The ARRL has proposed the elimination of the Morse Code test for the General class license, so that it would only be retained for the Amateur Extra class license.

Now that's self-righteous of you, Len!

I am. Always have been.

Gee, Len, you want your way all the time - even in things that do not affect you at all (like the license tests for an Amateur Radio license).

How many times are you going to beat that dead horse, Len?

Do you think that only those who have served our country in way you approve of should have the right to express their opinions?

K8MN served our country in both the military and in government service IIRC. Yet you behave towards him the same as you behave towards me.

I think it's not in the best interests of Amateur Radio - or the USA.

YMMV.

You didn't answer the questions.

The receiver in question is not a version of W6TC's HBR designs. It was a design of my own, the second in a series of three receivers using the same basic concepts.

> That it "works good" is highly subjective and not quantifiable.

Of course it's quantifiable. It was a better receiver than anything else available to me at the time. Much better than what it replaced.

That's nice. And before that, his (subsidized) work enabled the freedoms that you take for granted.

Larry Roll was a MSgt in the USAF. If I understand his period of service, his "inactive" service commitment of 10 years just expired.
That's twenty years of putting your freedoms ahead of himself and his family, followed by another 10 years of being on call to do it again.

Roger had to pass the test twice, because the FCC forced him to Poor Lardass, he can't read:

http://www.arrl.org

NOTE: Issuance by the FCC of a Warning Notice indicates that the FCC has what it believes to be reliable evidence of possible rules infractions and not necessarily that the recipient has violated FCC rules. The FCC has the authority, pursuant to §97.519(d)(2) of the rules to readminister any examination element previously administered
by a volunteer examiner.

Funny how your story changes.....

You couldn't find the Marshall County, WV ARES website, much less a "webcam server" site.

"FUCKUP Lee" <SLee@houston-hunks.com> geography idiot and imbecile
fucks up as usual when he thinks Marshall County, Alabama

Saggytits Lee manages to fumble again when he tried to backpedal on his improper use of words by once again mangling the sentence in reply <gweasy.long.hair@houston-hunks.com>:

"The word "operate" can be a synonym "use" in certain contexts"

Saggytits Lee (SLee@houston-hunks.com) talks out of his fat ignorant

VOTE! or lose your bitchin' rights.

do youze guys want this here group to be unmoderated or moderated? Free speech or censorship?

Advantage of Moderated: Roger is flushed.

Disadvantage of Moderated: Paul Schleck will censor what you can say or not say.

3681. Techno Remix of Bizarre CB Transmission

From the official Web site:

" They Call Me The Midnight Cowboy...
Late on the night of 9/20/06 (actually 9/21/06, 0528 UTC), Dan Quintiliani, K3DRQ stumbled across a bizarre CB transmission while tuning the dial on his IC-725 ham radio transceiver. The transmission went something like this:

"They call me the Midnight Cowboy, the Midnight Cowboy, They call me the Midnight, Midnight, Midnight, Midnight, Midnight..."

...over and over again.

So, Dan decided to record this transmission on his computer, and (soon afterward) to make a techno remix of it."

Those newer webcams include automatic switchover to night vision mode when it gets dark, but the pictures are in that typical blue-green monochrome mode, and it's tough to make out fine details. Are you trying to save on your electric bill? It doesn't look like you turn your lights on at night, but maybe it's just the night vision mode that makes things look that way.

Both cameras are at the same IP address but use separate, non-standard tcp ports. It's surprising that Schwartz and his buddies were able to find them in the first place, since scanning local broadband providers for user port 80 (the http port) wouldn't have worked. Schwartz must be a really skilled hacker.

It appears that your neighbor(s) access their security webcams while away from home, and that's why they're on the internet 24/7. I'd give you the IP address and the port numbers, but that would ruin all our fun, because you'd soon figure out who had the cameras, and you'd ask the neighbor(s) to point the cameras in a different direction.

Smile, Woger, you're on Candid Camera.

Jimmy avoided the obvious by misdirection into another's alleged "misbehavior." Let's review that stuff about bus driving by a pro-coder-uber-alles in this newsgroup:

Roll bragged himself to the skies in here about his academic achievements while in some alleged college classes. He said outright that he could get any job he wanted in 'human resources' (personnel) after graduation. What did he do instead? Became a bus driver.

Not just any bus driver, but one who "performed a service to senior citizens" by slapping on a terrific (bafflegab) TITLE to that job. Muy importante! :-)

So, we got treated to brags-before-they-happened by a morse-man, then brags-after-he-couldn't-fulfill-his-original-brags as performing some kind of 'service' to his community?

Now I've nothing against bus drivers, per se, provided they observe all the vehicle laws and don't injure anyone. The transportation services in any community do serve a purpose.
However, Jimmy took it all OUT OF CONTEXT, conveniently omitting the blatant brags of Roll before-the-fact about his 'excellence' of scholarship and 'getting any job (in human resources) he wanted.' Roll did NOT get a job in human resources (personnel work). Roll got a job as a bus driver. Jimmy tried to defend that by some kind of weird 'patriot' ploy saying morseman Roll did his service-to-the-community thing.

In the east San Fernando Valley section of Los Angeles, there are at least five small bus services NOT part of the Metro Transit District big bus lines, all kept going by (what Jimmy calls "subsidies from taxpayers") monies NOT derived from "free market" captitalism. I have nothing against those, either. They serve the communities.

But, Larry Roll was a MORSEMAN, an AMATEUR morseman. It is the usual Standard Operating Procedure for ALL amateur morsemen to support one another in here; none can do wrong. Even if what they talk about hasn't the remotest chance of being about amateur radio, the amateur morsemen are "right" and others are "wrong" to criticize them.

Supporters. The "jock straps" of old radio operating skills.

>> > Two bus drivers have been in here; one left and one died.
>> Both are missed.

Jimmy is incorrect. Both were HIT many times when they were here. HIT right on their self-described importance of morsemanship.

Richard Carroll, W0EX, is also gone. He was such an amateur morseman that he claimed to carry around a code key in his car to use in case of an earthquake in the Missouri area.

That makes THREE morsemen who are "missed" by other morsemen.

Who will be the fourth morseketeer? The Katapult King?

>> IIRC, one of Larry Roll's duties was transporting senior citizens and >> disabled people who couldn't drive. His work made it possible for them >> to have much more mobility and independence.

Brian, that's one of the grossest bits of bullshit that Jimmy has come up with in here. Here's a plain and simple fact: Larry Roll, K3LT, got a job as a bus driver because he could NOT get his choice of 'human resources' jobs. Roll FAILED to live up to his own brags in here, so he rationalized it into this 'serving the community' BS...and Jimmy just repeated a version of it above.

>That's nice. And before that, his (subsidized) work enabled the >freedoms that you take for granted.

Military servicemen are NOT subsidized. They are PAID for their service by the government.

Some military personnel PAY the dearest price of all: Their LIFE. Over three thousand United States military persons paid that price in Iraq alone since our invasion of that country in 2003.

I wonder what Jimmy thinks is a "subsidy" for volunteering to give their LIFE for their country?

>Larry Roll was a MSgt in the USAF. If I understand his period of >service, his "inactive" service commitment of 10 years just expired.
>That's twenty years of putting your freedoms ahead of himself and his >family, followed by another 10 years of being on call to do it again.

Brian, that is irrelevant to Jimmy. Jimmy knows nothing of military service, isn't involved, isn't a participant, never was, never volunteered, wan't even a ("subsidized") government worker.

Here's a plain and simple fact: By all apearances in this newsgroup, James Miccolis has only ONE standard of others:
Morsemen are "good," non-morsemen are "bad, wrong, in error"
(and usually of lesser status as human beings).

It's the amateur morsemen's way...

I wasn't trying to insult anyone, Len.

However, you usually feel insulted whenever someone disagrees with you here.

Who are you quoting, Len?

I don't think that way, nor have I ever said or written that quote.

There are some kinds we could do without....

Why do you find the term "subsidy" insulting, Len?

What is not true in the following:

"My point was simply that certain people and industries are paid by the government rather than the free market. The government decides that something needs to be done for the public good, and that user fees can't pay for it, so taxpayer money pays for it."

Where is the insult in that?

How?

Is any of that not true?

Are you sure?

Besides, it's not about me, Len.

Did you go to Catholic school, Len? I think not. Yet you act like you know what it was like. Here's a clue: You don't know what it was like.

Dozens of workers died building Hoover Dam. Even more were injured.
Death and injury benefits weren't very good. The companies did not even provide hard hats for the workers.

You didn't answer the questions, Len.

I think slow code must be a big man, I mean a hugh cocked man!

I dream of lying on my back with my ass jacked high into the air! Then SC enters my hot man cunt and fucks me really hard. Then he pulls out of me and shoves his massive tool into my mouth and I taste my ass on his cock. I tell SC how great his cock tastes with my love juices all over it. Then he finishes off all over my face!

You are one of the reasons we are working on a moderaded news group. Posters like you will not be allowed to post in the new group unless you show some civility in your posts.

The new Big 8 procedures will allow us to create a moderated news group within a matter of days after we decide to do it. Look for rec.radio.amateur.policy.moderated to appear during November of this year, and eat your mother fucking heart out because you won't be able to goddamn post.

Wiseman isn't Jewish but you and Davies are. Ron Wiseman is not related to Roger Wiseman, you idiot. However Roger's heritage is from the U.K.
yours and Davies is from hymietown.

http://www.houseofnames.com/coatofarms_details.asp?sId=&s=Davies

http://www.houseofnames.com/coatofarms_details.asp?sId=&s=Wiseman

The Wiseman family has descended through the lines of the ancient Anglo-Saxon culture. Their name reveals that an early member was a wise or learned person. Further research revealed that the name is derived from the Old English words wis, meaning wise or knowledgable, and man, meaning man. Spelling variations include: Wiseman, Wyseman, Wysman, Wisman and others.
First found in Essex where they were anciently seated, before and after the Norman Conquest in 1066.
Some of the first settlers of this name or some of its variants were:
Henry and Catherine Wiseman, who settled in Maryland in 1634; John Wiseman, who settled in Virginia in 1652; Henry Wiseman, who settled in Maryland in 1719.(Above is a small excerpt from our 1800 word history)

"Torturing my words" is a turn of phrase that says that you have twisted my words' meaning or context, specifically the context in which I might have used the word "enjoy." I never stated that I "enjoy" the negative behavior that presently goes on in here, nor used synonymous phrasing (see below). You're clearly wanting to argue it both ways. You want to make unproven assertions, then if the accused want to defend themselves and offer convincing evidence in their defense, you want to admonish them for not understanding that "this is not a court of law." Rather, it seems to be one where the only acceptable evidence in Len's mind is that which advances Len's arguments.

I have since found the specific E-mail message to you, dated January 23 2004, that supports my denial. Do you object to me putting it up temporarily off of my home page, and posting a link here?

I was referring to individuals like K8MN, N2EY, and "Old Friend" who have followed up in this thread. A wider audience than just the trolls and problem users.

Well, at least you're willing to admit that the FCC Comments and Petitions process is unbiased to submitters. We have/had some on this newsgroup that weren't even willing to admit that.

Dave Heil is free to chime in again if he feels that I have misquoted

How about this, Len:

I acknowledge that we have problem users, trolls, etc. on this newsgroup. I will consult, on an ongoing basis, with newsgroup participants for specific recommendations for actions, such that I am not contributing to this problem through my inaction.

Would that satisfy you?

Let's recap:

Paul: "I know Dave Heil. I respect Dave Heil. I don't need to be a clone of Dave Heil to express an opinion in this forum."

Len: "Tsk. A paraphrase of a Senator who lost an election is a poor choice of words..."

Why mention that the Senator "lost an election" if it doesn't attempt to advance any argument other than an undermining of my words and his? Why dig up the bones of a dead man just to have something to throw at me?

Which is the greater "Tsk"-able offense in your mind? That I've allegedly cribbed from someone? Or that I've allegedly paraphrased a quote from a context where the person stating it was not successful in his goals?

You made your argument above appear stronger by conveniently deleting the quoted paragraphs in your latest followup where I do acknowledge multiple possible credits for my wording, and where I also argue that the Senator's quote helped win the 1992 election. It's reasonable to argue that pacing of short, declarative sentences to build to a conclusion is a common technique that both the Senator and I were using, and both owe our thanks to a rich and common language heritage that existed well before our times. If I wanted to crib the Senator's words, I may as well have copied them exactly:

"Herb, I served with Dave Heil, I knew Dave Heil, Dave Heil was a friend of mine. Herb, you are no Dave Heil."

but that would have been a very different quote, now wouldn't it?

Shakespeare is useful to mention here because he is viewed as one of the first writers to really wield modern English deftly, including its iambic pacing for dramatic effect, and leave a surviving record of his writing. Even centuries later, we can all learn from his example.

Among other issues, "to advocate the elimination of the manual morse code test in US amateur radio licensing."

Since your stated goal above is also one of mine, why are there arguments, attacks, etc., directed by you against me? Do you feel that only you are capable of properly advancing these arguments in this forum, and no one else? Do you still not "give a flying fig" about others' positions, even when they agree with yours? That's solipsism.

Here's a challenge to you, Len. I respectfully request that you publicly make the following, objectively true, statement:

"Paul and I share a common goal to advocate the elimination of the manual morse code test in US amateur radio licensing."

If you don't like the exact wording, feel free to come up with some of your own.

I can't predict for certain in advance what the final form of a moderated newsgroup would be, or if it would even be voted into existence on the first attempt. Specific approval/disapproval of articles would have to wait for submission of those articles, and would have to be decided upon by the moderation team, not just me.

However, other moderated newsgroups that are considered successful usually consider the following behavior to be grounds for a temporary or permanent ban:

- Provocation/Prevarication

- Arguing against those that agree with you (i.e., arguing for the sake of arguing)/Filibustering/"Grease" (extending debate by avoiding direct rejoinder)

- Name-calling/uncivil tone/disrespect for newsgroup participants

- Trying to argue both ways/applying different standards of evidence to yourself versus others

- Trying to justify the above behavior with, "But he started it!"

In particular, I don't think there's a moderator of any existing newsgroup that would accept the last argument as justification.

I wonder what you would have said if you were actually "trying?"

Equating military service with welfare is about all I can take.

Here's an idea that I have seen work: email reflectors with a moderator.

Anyone interested can sign up to the reflector - but they have to give a real email address and identity to the moderator/list coordinator. No anonymous stuff.

The moderators don't read and approve each and every email before it is reflected. But if someone steps too far out of the reflector guidelines, or goes too far off topic, they're warned. If they do it too many times they are simply banned from the reflector. Which happens very rarely.

That system works very well. Disagreements abound, yet are handled with civility. And a lot of good information and discussion results.

The whole thing is simple and straightforward, and works for anyone who has email.

Why all the complexity of a moderated newsgroup if it can be done by email? What are the advantages of usenet over a reflector?

And to get back on topic:

1) I think it would be useful to the amateur radio community for us to know the involvement of local amateurs in bringing Gerritsen to justice. IOW, what worked and what didn't, what hams can do and what they should not do in such cases, etc.

2) "Amateur Radio Policy" goes far beyond the Morse Code test issue.
Sooner or later, the FCC will announce what it will do wrt the recent NPRM.

IMHO, FCC may do the following:

A) Increase code testing (chances of that are infinitesimal)

B) Leave the present requirement unchanged (possible but unlikely)

C) Eliminate code test for General but keep it for Extra (majority of commenters want this, but it's not very likely)

D) Combine code and written testing in such a way that the code test still exists, but there are other testing options, so that the Morse Code test is no longer an absolute, no-other-option requirement for any class of amateur license. This has been done in Canada and was suggested in my comments. (Possible)

E) Completely eliminate Morse Code testing. (Most likely)

If the FCC does A, B or C, the Morse Code test debates will probably continue.

But if FCC does D or E, what policy issues should be on the table next?

Len feels insulted whenever disagrees with him here, or proves him to be mistaken about something.

> Equating military service with welfare is about all I can take.

Who did that? Not me. I didn't use the word "welfare", Brian. You did.

Are subsidies and welfare the same thing to you?

Are farm subsidies a form of welfare? How about tax breaks and other incentives given to big corporations?

Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary defines "subsidy" as:

"a grant by a government to a private person or company to assist an enterprise deemed advantageous to the public"

No mention of "welfare" in that.

Jimmie was never in the military. He was never a participant. He has never been in government service of any kind. Jimmie has never volunteered to serve his country in anything. Jimmie has never taken that Oath that real veterans took. He is superior.

I'm not "taking" any of it.

Jimmie can go over to his nearest military recruitment station and repeat his "subsidy" crack to any military person in there.

After that, the "fourth morseketeer" would be absent from RRAP.

Chris,

Normally I would agree that killfiles and delete buttons are certainly indicated in a case like this, but there is a certain amount of newsgroup etiquette that is warranted on your part, too. You can't just do whatever you want on a newsgroup with no accountability and expect everyone else to modify their behavior to accomodate yours. You even cite Usenet etiquette in your own post, so how about doing your share in applying said etiquette to yourself?

I completely agree. If you want to filter out the less serious, then use a relevant method. Here in Canada, in order to get a no-code prowess will always be important regardless of the mode of Paul, all I did was write some words in here...in the same context as some amateur morsemen love to do...and then you take that as "a falsehood that you are unwilling to retract"!

Your buttons got pushed. And your "arming switch" was set to "FIRE!" rather than "Safe." :-)

This newsgroup is NOT a court of law. Really.

>I have since found the specific E-mail message to you, dated January 23 >2004, that supports my denial. Do you object to me putting it up >temporarily off of my home page, and posting a link here?

I have no objections. You are welcome to copy Robeson's short-lived home page of "Never Trust Lennie" if you are so disturbed by things in here. :-)

[I don't have a copy. Too bad. It was a classic of libel and outrage by one who could not control himself in here]

I can't possibly control the actions of a licensed extra class radio amateur (20 WPM code test kind), can I? After all, those licensed extra class radio amateurs who are "participants"
in here can't control the trolls, anony-mousies, sociopaths, and others (too strange to classify) who post in here. You expect ME to "control them?" :-)

>I was referring to individuals like K8MN, N2EY, and "Old Friend" who >have followed up in this thread. A wider audience than just the trolls >and problem users.

Small Freudian slip there. "Individuals" who you think are surnamed by call letters are rather blatant pro-morse-code-test fanatics. The "Old Friend" is also a licensed US radio amateur but you fail to note his call and name. Mark Morgan is a no-code-test advocate. See the relationship?

The probable (note supposition, not fact) "moderation" to be seems evident.

>>>If words are useless in this forum, why do you continue to contribute >>>many, many such words?
>> Because I can! :-)
>I guess I can't argue with that.

Right! Now you are beginning to see the problem! :-)

This newsgroup has been out of control for a long time.
Anyone can post anything, including someone who forges your name "@novena.net".

That's the reason that I recommend Total Dissolution of this newsgroup. Elimination. For an indefinite period of time.

>I can't make sense of it, but I can't argue with it.

Then you would be a poor choice for moderator. I've had experience as a BBS public board moderator for several years. It takes "brass ones" to be polite to everyone but its the only way to do effective moderation. You CANNOT be a participant in ANY argumentative subject in such an environment. That would be subjective bias.
Such as what you want to do in here...

>> Outside of FCC Comments and Petitions, there are very few UNBIASED >> venues for speaking one's mind on any amateur radio policy issues.
>Well, at least you're willing to admit that the FCC Comments and >Petitions process is unbiased to submitters.

"Admit?!?" [bad choice of a word, Paul]

I have STATED what I wrote before. The FCC has stated that.
The Communications Act of 1934 that established the FCC must accept commentary from all citizens on radio regulations, ALL radio regulations. It is STATED in law.

>We have/had some on this >newsgroup that weren't even willing to admit that.

NOT my problem, NOT my words you talk about. "You want to make unproven assertions, then if the accused want to defend themselves and ..." Do not blame me for "others words."

>I found Herb's "standards of newsgroup righteousness" to be >arbitrary, and said so.

So noted. Now what, another knock on the door by "officials" for partially agreeing with him?

>Dave Heil is free to chime in again if he feels that I have misquoted >him by my assertion that he agrees with me that Herb was being >disingenuous, and that Herb was not speaking for him.

Heil frequently "chimes in" about others and others'
words, even taking it upon himself to "answer" replies made to another. He does this mostly to no-code-test advocates who are replying to amateur extra morsemen.
Google is full of his posts in that manner. QED.

["Chimes?" A whole table full of ringing bells manned by morsemen ringers...and ding-alingers]

>I acknowledge that we have problem users, trolls, etc. on this >newsgroup. I will consult, on an ongoing basis, with newsgroup
>participants for specific recommendations for actions, such that I am >not contributing to this problem through my inaction.

As I said before this post and in this post, I recommend Total Dissolution of this newsgroup. For an indefinite time period. [can't get any more "specific" than that]

This newsgroup does not serve its original purpose, that of arguing the morse code test retention or elimination in US amateur radio regulations. It has become a sewer of filthy outpourings from trolls, sociopaths, misfits, some of whom are identifiable as having amateur radio licenses...very few engaging in an approximation of "debate." It is a travesty of its intended purpose.

>Would that satisfy you?

Why do you ask? I am a no-code-test advocate. My FCC license is a Commercial one. I don't parrot ARRL maxims.

I am merely a US citizen, one who has made a career in electronics-radio, and served his country honorably in the US military. Why ask ME? I'm not a "participant" in licensed amateur radio...the kind where all the licensees think they "run" it. I'm not one to slavishly hold to old standards and practices in amateurism when they are out of date. I don't need the emotional sustenance of rank-status-title for "privileges" that were lobbied for by older rank-status-title amateurs.

If you need to ASK someone, look to the public, to those who WILL inherit the future involving radio. They will outlive the rest of us. Will those of the near-future look on US amateur radio as a quaint anachronism of ancient times if it is frozen in place? I am willing to bet they will but I'm hopeful to be proven wrong on that statement. Only time will tell...

He ja go folks!! Yet MORE amazing video of a "certain ham radio op" that frequents
the RRAP and RRS newsgroups. Enjoy !

"Stuff happens."

BTW, this "Jawod" signed a message on rec.radio.amateur.homebrew as "AB8O." I found a blank on that call sign at QRZ.

> >Yes it's obsolete. Yes, it's fun.

I agree. Manual radiotelegraphy has NONE of the body language or tone of voice or much of anything that is normal in everyday person-to-person contacts. Using this monotonic form of very early radio allows any user to be anything they want with no real references to anything but the ability to send telegraphy.

Heh heh...if the test is eliminated the expressed outrage, anguish, and horror will be a horrendous wail never to be silenced until the last code key is pried from cold, dead fingers! :-)

I'd say "clog" as in cholesterol clogging those "hearts."

"Jawod" uses "many" AS IF it were quantitative. Not so much in the USA now. The US Technician class licensees now number about 49% of all, twice as large a number as the General class. I doubt they want to hear such facts.

In the USA the number of newcomers is not able to keep pace with the expirations of licensees. That trend has been evident for more than a year. [see www.hamdata.com] The majority of new licensees are Technician class. Novice class, the supposed traditional "beginner" license has been expiring at a steady rate for years before the US changes in 2000.

"Jawod" and other morsemen think that all will "like" what they like. They really don't understand what other citizens want.

That sounds fair. In general I've approved what Industry Canada does on communications regulations...a bit more than what the FCC does for US civil radio services.

I will hazard a guess: You "can" because your 'puter is capable of doing so. You "don't" because you don't subscribe ergo your 'puter fails to respond. k35454.

Slow Code you're an idiot, because only an idiot would contine to post this sort of crap over and over on multiple groups...

No code licensing has done nothing to hurt CW or other license classes, and certainly hasn't turned Ham radio into Children's Band, at least where I live (or have lived over the past 40 years or so)

I don't know where you live, but where I live, the conversations are at least as techincal on 2 meterss as they were before (even 25 years back), and maybe even more so. Given your agenda on polluting the newsgroups (and probably bands too, if you actually do get on the ham bands) with this crap that supposes than anyone that doesn't do 20+wpm code is not a ham, or other similar pretenses, I doubt if you actually are even active on the bands... (bigots rarely are, in my experience).

Yep, we talk about a lot of very technical topics, not the least of which occur on 2 meters, and on local nets, or offline on other frequencies during the day (and heave3n forbid, we actually use telephones too!, and with others outside of our area. The future of ham radio in the Hawaiian islands is likely to be relatively bright, even without an increase in CW. CW is not only the slowest method of communicating, it also is the oldest. Why don't you look into some of the relatively recent advances in the hobby, which most of us have at least evaluated and determined whether we wish to participate, rather than the continual baiting and other crap you post on the groups?

By the way, I can't recall seeing you post an actual call sign, just a "slow code" moniker, so how would any of us really know you are one of us anyway? Even if you are, your'e clearly one that should have been outed many years ago.

Despite the feeling I'm doing nothing more than feeding a troll, I feel it's time to see if you're actually real... IF SO, please reply to my email address (not on the groups, you've polluted them enough already) and we can hopefully entertain an intelligent conversation.

Thanks

WHAT "USMC imposter", Lennie...?!?!?

There's ANOTHER "Steven James Robeson" posting here? I don't think so.

And since what YOU refer to as "filthy blitherings" have been almost exclusively directed at you and your Feebel Five bretheren, I'd hardly find any objectivity in your statements.

Your rhetorical prose notwithstanding, you've been caught in lie-after-lie and in one effort to cheat and deceive after another.

Leonard H Anderson's (non) record for honesty and "civil debate"
in this forum have been well established.

At least the webcams operating on standard port 80 are easily found.

Woger, you can go to http://www.opentopia.com/hiddencam.php to see how Schwartz and company may have found those open cams in your neighborhood. It seems that there are a number of people who use automated methods to actively search for open webcams and who then list them on their web sites. Opentopia is just one of many such sites. You can use it to find some WV library webcams which show fat girls studying in the library. Another weekend, one tank trip for you?

No...that was YOU.

The "flamers" and "kooks" were pretty much content to live on .misc. They came in AFTER your "resurgence" and new cross-posting attacks, Mork.

Nope.

The fact that you continue to post over 200 posts A DAY even when I am not here proves it.

So it proves what kind of "man" you are to use deceased children like you do.

Maybe YOU will have one soon enough?

What's an "afrount", Morkie?

Why haven't you hired that tutor yet?

Nothing Morkie says can be taken at face value. He's a liar of monumental proportion. he deserves the public humiliation that is served upon him.

I don't expect you to repost her private email even though I get the idea it would really show her out to be a huge liar today WRT the excuses she's been making for PJR again.

Funny enough she started out yesterday by meekly admitting she was wrong on both soc.men and SMM but the more that Skirvin idiot and his gal pal news.groupies started bucking poor little PJ up and making excuses for the inexcusable, the more Jayne did the same.

She has now done a 180 turn around from those first posts where she accepted accountability. What's worse she's got her hubby, Vic, on here writing defensive idiocies for PJ as well. He even went one better and blamed me and Tom for making PJ call me all those vile names, etc.

>I do not understand

First truthful thing you've said to me to date. You really don't understand but what is worse is that you don't want to understand (or even listen to) any perspective that conflicts with your already made up mind. I believe you really think you are the last expert on everything from soup to nuts and the rest of us aren't as smart as you are so you don't need to carefully and conscientiously consider our view points. That's why you don't understand.

It's also why SMM was doomed from the start.

>why you see my various statements as incompatable.

Because you cannot see anything but gray areas when it comes to what you WANT to see. You can't comprehend certain absolutes such as there is Black and White, Right and Wrong, Foolish and Smart, Good and Evil.

You insist that k00ks and PJR in particular are in that gray fuzzy area between Good and Evil ..but they are not. However, you have NO trouble seeing Andre and me as WRONG. In fact, you have no trouble finding fault with Andre and me simply because unlike the k00ks, we are honest. We don't toy with you and kiss your ass to make you believe we agree with what you WANT to hear. We give you the truth...or did when SMM was being approved.

Even after having been fooled twice by k00ks you insist on defending them as "honorable" and "good" people when their only purpose and mission in all of this is to make fun of people in cruel ways and and to do even worse...such as what they did to krp and Sunny to name but two people who got reamed in Real Life by your k00k pals. With Sunny it was Sharon and Jade who spearheaded the effort BTW. Sunny lost her job. I know this to be a fact because I knew her in Real Life as well as on soc.men.

Do you think that anything Andre and I say...mere words limited to a computer screen in disagreement with others...is as cruel and mean and viscious as getting someone fired from their job? You apparently believe these k00ks are harmless but what is worse is you REFUSE to listen to any information that is contrary to your personal belief system about these people.

>I was wrong to ask PJR to be a moderator for smm.

Correct. You also owe me an apology for the vile things your hand picked and promised as "honorable" moderator said about me. It is one thing to be treated that way in an unmoderated forum like soc.men. It is quite another to be guaranteed protection from it and then be attacked by the guard that you, Jayne, basically hired to protect me from that very type of abuse.

>I am responsible for any >problems smm is facing due to decisions that I made as proponent.

Correct but not good enough. You were given quite a bit of valid and proven information by me. You "said" you read it. Maybe you browsed it. I bet not. It conflicted with your preconceived notions and that is something you just didn't want to hear about so I think it was dismissed out of hand.

You were warned by me and Andre and MCP and maybe a few others over and again and you gave us NO real hearing at all while you flirted and gushed over posts to trolls like Sharon, Jade, and PJR. You simply were not fair in any single way you gathered information and processed it. You had your mind made up from Day One and That was That.

Which is why SMM was doomed from the start.

>PJR made
>a post about you on smm that was completely out of line.

That's it? That's as bad as it gets in your criticism of his "farewell address"? Even now you can't bear to really criticize him because after all, you chose him. To criticize him is to take on responsibility for what happened and you apparently are more interested in covering your own ass than in speaking the full truth.

>Before that he >was an excellent moderator and was working very hard.

Whoopee! 34 posts in 15 days. The guy should be given a medal. Get real.

>I still like him and >think he is a basically good person.

That's exactly what I criticized you for above. Gray matter. You can't see that he is not a basically good person even after he betrayed you, wrote all that vile crap about me AFTER he promised to follow the charter and broke that promise....yes...you still think he's basically good and I suppose I'm still the evil meanie in your eyes. Incredible. PJR is an evil person. Ask Sunny.

>All of these statements are true and >can be held at the same time.

With the exception of your first statement...that you don't understand...nothing else you've said is true. The rest of your words are merely your wishes as to what reality and truth should be according to you. I don't think you have a very tight grasp of the real world. You are great with the book learning stuff...but unless a book tells you when to come in out of the pouring rain, I bet you don't know how to do it.

A nice, fine, foamy froth. Lie much, Jill? PJR never intended on being SMM's sole effective mod, and when everyone else was either too busy or just couldn't be arsed to lift a finger as a mod, he quit. I'd have done likewise, and so would most people. So would anyone with an ounce of self-respect. Now, Andre, have anything to say to Jade about Jill's meltdowns? Not that I'd expect integrity from a soc.fr00t, but WTF. Lots of things happen that I never expect.

Yep...And STILL right on...Althoght this is the third thread you've recited over.

It's not hurtful to me. I call a spade a spade. YOU said you take sex by force...Bad thing to say in an archived forum, fatso.

You're here, aren't you?

Prove me wrong. And get that semi-profile shot so we can see that baby belly you claim "she's" got.

And I keep telling you that if YOU stopped brining it up, it wouldn't get discussed...But YOU do, so now EVERYONE on the NG is well aware of your preference for underage sex partners....

What libelous accusations?

> At least the webcams operating on standard port 80 are easily found.

You can't even find the Marshall County WV ARES website. You can't even tell the make and color of Roger's car. If such a website (a neighbor's webcam server) existed, you wouldn't hesitate to post it all over the newsgroups. Your "webcam across from his house" story has more holes in it than swiss cheese or your whore mommy's underwear. It's a good thing you post from "Houston's least reliable ISP" because your posts are the least reliable to have any facts contained in them.

Saggytits Lee (Stagger Lee@houston-hunks.com) fails to back up his "webcam story" when he changes the subject with lame excuses when asked what type of car Roger drives and it's color in <night.vision.woger@houston-hunks.com>:
"Those newer webcams include automatic switchover to night vision mode when it gets dark, but the pictures are in that typical blue-green monochrome mode, and it's tough to make out fine details."

Robesin can abuse all of Mark's living relations, but not his dead relations? That must make him morally superior to Mark, doesn't it? Robesin da Man! Give's him bragging rights on the "God Hates Fags" website, doesn't it?

Mark just out-assholed Robesin, that's all. Don't like it? Lots of people don't like what Robesin does. I guess he'll eventually get used to it like we've gotten used to Robesin's incessant accusations and lies.

> ...I have no doubt that he's your culprit.

Don't know. Robesin has been caught making anonymous posts. Could have been him.

Anyway, Mark just wanted an apology for the mayhem Robesin caused him on RRAP. Robesin is incapable of making one. So he files lawsuit(s) instead of showing an ounce of humanity.

BTW, I removed from this reply all the other radio groups that Robesin was spamming.

Had you read my posts, you would know that I said that I would NOT supply the URI (the term "URL" has been deprecated), because we DON'T want you figuring out whose webcams are pointed in the general direction of your house.

As to your vehicle, I simply haven't seen it. I did notice that you don't seem to turn the lights on at night, though. Maybe you had taken the Yahoo girl friend out to the Shipwreck Lounge.

When others cross his lines, he claims he has an attorney and is filing

Not much is known about Jim, except the usual liberal disdain for the US military and military members.

And that He thinks his favorite mode should be forced down everyone's

I disagree.

I think your average service person knows that their is a large segment of US society that looks down on them. But they are intelligent enough to know just how wrong that segment of society is. The servicemen and women stand guard without thought to their popularity.

In other words, Jim would be perfectly safe in any recruiter's office, though his visit might be short. Unless he wound up in Robesin's dads recruiter office...

And who would post on a "God Hates Fags" site?

Mork always does. As do you and the other F5 Bretheren, Brain.

Who's Robesin, and WHAT "incessant accusations and lies"...?!?!

You mean one's like "ARES won't respond to a major disaster?"

Or "ARES members are too over commited to make it work".

Perhaps you meant "Unlicensed devices play a major role in emergency comms"..?!?!

All of those were YOUR lies and accusations, none of which has been even remotely validated.

There's others, and yes, they will continue to haunt you as long as you keep trying to play yourself up as "innocent bystander", Brain.

Who's "Robeson", and when did he get caught making "anonymous

Again, if you refer to me, you are again LYING, Mr Burke. Perhaps you should try some different tactic because lying is not your forte.

Apologies for WHAT, Brain? The "mayhem" that Morkie Moron has "suffered" has been in direct proportion to any mayhem HE has delivered and delivered first and in quantity.

And perhaps removed it from the one that the original

I'll concede that you have the more realistic scenario of today's recruiting office. Those military members ARE intelligent and they are motivated. Today's military members aren't the dumb misfits portrayed by "the liberals." However, there's also "conservatives" who think little of the military...except as fine

words to spout come election time.

There's a parallel in amateur radio recruiting. From the ARRL down, the higher-ups love to look down on aspirants as dummies in radio...as if their lofty elite positions made them "expert." These self-proclaimed gods of radio then wonder why there isn't more participation and - especially - why there's so little love for their self-righteous precious, noble, best-of-all-possible-modes (in their minds), radiotelegraphy.

It's still a puzzle why an ex-USN type would be at any Army recruiting office as a civilian...as Robesin once stated. But that can be relegated to just-another-delusional-dream of the Imposter.

Since you're top posting it's a bit difficult to tell what you're really responding to, but since my Amateur call is right there in my screen name, the "nickname" line, and at my signature, why would you have to pay someone to find out who I am?

And I've never said anything about your mother.

Like I said...Look to KB9RQZ for that kind of behaviour...He thrives on it.

The Celtic cross on your front door was a symbol used by crusaders when they murdered Muslim women and children. Maybe some Pittsburgh Muslim extremists should be told that you commemorate the crusades at your house. I'll give them the URL to the webcam which shows your front door.

You are building a Mount Everest out of an anthill. :-)

Try to remember that ANY public posting in any computermodem venue, from early BBS to the Internet, is OPEN for "commentary" by ANYONE. If you take offense at every negative comment that you perceive is directed at you, you are already in trouble. But, that trouble is only yours, your perception.

Try to concentrate on amateur radio policy matters in this newsgroup. If you want to do Literary Review things, I'm sure there is some kind of newsgroup for that somewhere.

This newsgroup is not a debate forum for national politics of the USA of the past millennium. Really.

Should I bring that up at the next Writer's Guild meeting in North Hollywood? How about the ABA in NYC? :-)

If you wish to admonish someone on use of the English language a la the academia way, try hundreds of postings
by OTHERS in this newsgroup for the past week. :-)

Oh, and in passing, academia itself is divided on this Shakespeare thing, especially on so few (read almost none) original manuscripts surviving and scant factual information about his life. BTASE, carry on with what you want to discuss in a Literary Review forum someplace else.

stainless steel cojones on the job, plus emotional shielding

Tsk, I state my opinions directly. If those collide with

Yes. "Carbon copies" of what Others say aren't required.

>That's solipsism.

No, that's just the way computer-modem communications work in public access. It was that way when ARPANET got big, it was that way when it morphed into USENET, and was that way when it was picked up on BBS networks.
And it remains that way on the Internet in those forums called "Usenet." <shrug>

You have to realize that not all people agree on things.
Really. That's what makes us all unique...with some possible exceptions of certain membership organizations in the NE USA...but that is more religion than anything else. :-)

Oh, I feel perfectly free to come up with whatever I want whether you like it or not. :-) Just as you are perfectly free to express the usual disdain, condescension, elitism of the federally-licensed high-born as practiced by others in here. :-) All that and more have been going on in here for years.

>I can't predict for certain in advance what the final form of a Ah, so the "voters" (in whatever Mt. Olympus like domain of the newsgroup powers-to-be) haven't got a clue as to what to do? Certainly sounds like that.

Hint: Do NOT advertise possibilities of the future in regards to "actions" of moderation. Just DO it. You don't even have to wear Nikes on that job. :-)

>Specific approval/disapproval of >articles would have to wait for submission of those articles, and would

Oh, goodie, it sounds like it will be weeks before someone considered offensive will be dealt with. Meanwhile, their offensive words will remain in view of all with access.

Remember what happened to the fabled Maginot Line? :-)

>However, other moderated newsgroups that are considered successful

Why do you address that to me? "Been there, done that" in

You WILL find that true moderator tasks will have to be more draconian. But, you seem to think that the powers-

That's like the myths held (dearly by some) by amateurs that amateurs invented radio. :-)

Heh heh heh, you (as a member of the moderating team) have to get the last little "dig" in? :-)

Tscha, my suggestion is still there: For an indefinite period of time DELETE this newsgroup. Put it on a hold, whatever. Let the sociopaths, misfits, the emotionally-disturbed malcontents go somewhere else for their filthy perverted jollies. You (and the newsgroup powers-that-be) cannot control them now, what makes you think you can control them with group "moderating?"

You have been a victim of forgery in here, an insidious little malignancy of a URL modification is all that was needed. What is there to stop forgeries in the future? "Noble intentions?!?" <raucous laughter elided>

Heck, Len, you don't seem to be able to control your own actions here...;-)

Gee, Len, you've posted here under at least seven different screen names - probably more. Sometimes you don't identify yourself anywhere in your posting. And you once denied posting here under a certain screen name ("Averyfine" or "Averyfineman") but then were shown to have been mistaken.

> That's the reason that I recommend Total Dissolution of

Why? If what goes on here bothers you too much, just leave. There are other forums.

I think Paul W. Schleck would be a great choice for moderator, even though I disagree with him on many amateur radio policy issues. K2UNK and K2ASP would be excellent, too. There are lots more - most of whom don't post here anymore.

> I've had > experience as a BBS public board moderator for several BBS's are old technology, Len. Does anybody even use them anymore?

> It takes "brass ones" to be polite to everyone
> but its the only way to do effective moderation.

Len, you're not polite in here to anyone who disagrees with you.

> You
> CANNOT be a participant in ANY argumentative subject in

That's simply not true.

All the moderator has to do is to point out when someone is beginning to push the group rules too far. If that person persists, they're banned from posting for a time.

Of course, that means things like name-calling would not be allowed.
Making fun of someone's gender, ethnicity, work experience or education, religion, etc., would get people kicked out.

> Such as what you want to do in here...

Seems to me that what Paul really wants is to discuss amateur radio policy without all the shenanigans.

Why? If it's that bad, why are you here at all, Len? There are other forums - but most of them are moderated.

> This newsgroup does not serve its original purpose, that
> of arguing the morse code test retention or elimination

It's also a forum for the discussion of other amateur radio policy issues, such as the number of license classes, the written exams, subband allocations, amateur radio license numbers, and much more. Most of which is being lost in the noise now.

Agreed!

> If you need to ASK someone, look to the public, to those Who are "the public", Len? Why would they want radio for its own sake?

The appeal of amateur radio has always been to the few.

> They will > outlive the rest of us.

Not all of them. "The public" keeps getting older and older....

btw, it was you (Leaonard H. Anderson) who suggested in official comments to FCC that there be an age requirement for all classes of amateur radio license. You specifically requested that the FCC keep anyone under the age of 14 years out of amateur radio. You wanted to ban some of the very people who would inherit the future involving radio.

> Will those of the near-future

We do know this: Lowering the code and written test requirements back in 2000 has not brought about sustained growth in the number of licensed US radio amateurs. The number of amateurs today is more than 15,000 lower than it was in 2000.

And on the subject of Mr. Gerritsen:

The Morse Code test did not "filter" him out of amateur radio. He never took one!

Andre thinks the world of Jill, apparently. And Jill has a meltdown every once in a while and froths at the mouth like a rabid bat. It's standard for her all the while she complains about not having a place to discuss issues rationally. She makes it out like she wanted to use SMM. She never wanted it from the start and right from the getgo, she did her best to bring it down. Her posts and Tom's were instrumental, IMO, in causing the crash of SMM. I expect that was her intention all along.

Nobody's interested in radiotelegraphy. Not even Val Germann who talked a good talk. He sure fooled a lot of people who desperately wanted to believe that a newbie was interested in learning the code.

Robesin is a habitual liar. If he were ever to tell a truth, no one would beleive it.

I don't think she has the smarts to think that many steps in advance.

Good questions!

Some of the answers are in the article "Tragedy of the Usenet Commons":

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.misc/msg/2c5a58c8d3396e17

that I relayed from Telecom Digest back in 2002, and recommended as useful reading to our proposed moderation team.

Successful mailing lists do not scale well with potentially thousands of subscribers. The subscribe/unsubscribe burden gets to be overwhelming.
Even with automation, there's still enough people who need manual assistance subscribing or unsubscribing. Also, the odds of tripping up SPAM filters goes up exponentially with audience size, either from automated mischaracterization, or misreading by human recipients.
Mailing lists with thousands of subscribers will generate hundreds of bounces every month due to changing E-mail addresses. Large mailing lists are also not an efficient use of Internet resources, since they send the same message over and over and over and ...

Unsuccessful mailing lists fragment audiences into tiny pockets, as mailing lists are not as well known or publicized as Usenet newsgroups. As the article above notes, even a great forum may go undiscovered by a user simply because "he or she doesn't know where to look or whom to ask." Duplication of effort, "re-inventing the wheel," and a shallow base of expertise then results. There are arguably many more "unsuccessful" mailing lists than successful ones because of this specific problem. This is the case even on Yahoo Groups, with many fragmented forums despite efforts to index groups and automate most of the administrative burdens.

Some of Usenet's weaknesses are also its strengths. It has a distributed transport scheme where every node on the network shares communications and storage burdens. It is universally available (well, still nearly so). It is publicly archived at Google. All forums are indexed in a newsgroups database available at every news server. It is a long-time, mature resource, with a strong self-governance. The newsgroups for amateur radio on Usenet are voted into existence by user consensus, and thus are recognized by everyone as the "official" newsgroups. How would you convince enough users what are the "official" replacement mailing lists?

I would disagree that Usenet newsgroups have to be complex. For one thing, we would propose to use Secure, Team-Based Usenet Moderation Program (STUMP):

http://www.algebra.com/~ichudov/stump/

Which is a working, stable solution used by many other newsgroups we would like to emulate, such as misc.kids.moderated. As with misc.kids.moderated, most of the initial configuration work would simply be figuring out who the white-list, black-list, and manual review submitters would be, and it will not be necessary to read every article submitted on an ongoing basis. As a result, we anticipate that the workload will drop over time.

All of this will be discussed in much more detail in the upcoming RFD.

Funny? No.

Stupid? Yes.

I guess the only excercise you ever get is your exercise in futility.
Even Len will tell you that he's not a ham, but you knew that already.

But you're in trouble from another direction. Mark Morgan hasn't been posting, because he's on his way to your house. By now he should have arrived in Glendale. I think he wants to spank you.

Agreed to a point.

Part of the question is size. How many people will really read a moderated policy group? The number of posters here has always been pretty small, and when you eliminate the anonymous, the people using multiple IDs and the noise, the numbers may be smaller than many reflectors I know of.

Agreed to a point. But at the same time, how much use does Usenet get anymore? For example, some time back, AOL discontinued direct access, citing low usage.

Maybe. The irony of the "information superhighway"

I see access going down, though. Besides AOL's discontinuance, Google has moved it to a back page, as it were. Website-based forums like qrz.com and eham.net seem much more active nowadays.

All I'm saying is that I've seen email reflectors work well with several hundred subscribers. How many people actually read rrap?

Looks doable. It appears to me, however, that every posting which gets through the basic robofilters is approved by a moderator before posting
- is that true?

Thanks for the info!

And I'll repeat my other question:

If the FCC simply drops the code test, or makes it optional like Canada did, what other policy topics would be on the table?

Nobody hides better than Roger Wiseman. He hides behind numerous sock puppets while accusing others of using sock puppets. He can't post as himself lest another ISP goes "poof". He hides behind his door when someone comes to call on him. He says that someone won't face him, yet when opportunities for testing his theory are offered, he fails to respond.

Roger is a sociopathic, demented little bastard (literally).

You're weaving another marvelous tale out of whole cloth. Who is it you believe to be looking down on military service members, Brian?

I stood guard in basic training. I was too busy working or sleeping to stand guard during the remainder of my four years. I never entered any popularity contests.

I noted Len's silly threat, made on behalf of others. You know and I know and even Len knows that such a thing would never happen.
Lamebrains are not chosen as recruiters. Any recruiter who acted in such a manner would not only not be a recruiter for very long, he'd be in the slammer. All that is beside the point. Jim hasn't made any disparaging remarks directed at the military and I doubt he spends a lot of time in or near recruiting offices. We've just been treated to more of Len's (not very ably assisted by you) diversionary mumbo-jumbo.

I move that we amend our military regulations so that each recruit to the enlisted ranks would enter military service at the E-9 grade. This would result in more participation by our citizenry and would prevent harm to anyone's self-esteem. We could also do away with military technical schools and the necessity for passing any exam which the new recruit might view as hazing. Calling any recruit a "dummy" would be banned.

I am 100% disabled. I can not get a job, so I don't have to worry about a security clearance.

> Your credit rating matters.

In most cases, but not always.

I got in the habit of paying in cash about 35 years ago when I owned a business, and my suppliers gave a 1.5% discount for paying cash within 10 days of the monthly statement being mailed. I paid cash for vehicles whenever possible to save the finance charges. In 54 years I have financed one new truck, and one home, 30 years ago. I have no need for credit, because if I can't afford something, I'll do without it. The VA takes care of all of my medical needs, and everything else is paid for.
I'm getting old and with my health problems I have no idea how long I'll be around. Its not the big deal it was when I was 20 years old.

Not vewy Innewesting at all.

Yellow Cab and Greyhound are for profit corporations.

Amtrak, Metropolitan Transit Authority (NYC), and Chicago Transit
Authority are public and are subsidized.

I'd have to get up pretty late in the morning to be corrected by the World's Greatest DXer.

I applied for a credit card in 1972 and was turned down because I was an E2 in the US Army. You had to be an E6 with five years to qualify, so I decided I was never going to waste my time applying again. The credit card companies have probably spent more trying to get me to apply for a card since them, than I would have used that Chevron card for.

I really can't travel very far, so I have no need to rent a car. In fact, my truck was out of commission for over a week before I was able to crawl under it and cut the damaged exhaust system apart and fix it.
I asked the young man who volunteers for the "Computers for Disabled Veterans" project get me a few groceries, but otherwise I didn't miss the truck. He is learning computer repair, in exchange for helping me finish more computers.

I have always lead a simple lifestyle. Sure there are lots of things around, but I rarely buy anything new. Only when I can't fix something, or build it from what I can find. Its very satisfying to look at something you've built and have someone ask, Wow! Where did you buy that? :)

I have picked up a couple truckloads of free angle iron bed frames to build some work carts, but first, I have to build a welding table. I have a lead on free reject sheets of plywood from a local mill to make shelving out of. Any sheet that has a splice, or is missing any glue is rejected. I want to build some shelving to store the spare computer parts, and wood trays to hold Hard drives, CDROM drives and Floppy drives. That way they can be sorted, tested, and ready to drop into a computer, as needed.

BTW, I was given another Compaq like yours with the VGA connector sheared off the motherboard. It works with a replacement AGP card, but you know me. I'm going to replace the connector so I can see if the onboard video is still ok. ;-)

"usual liberal disdain"?

Let's see....some well known "liberals"....

There's president Jimmy Carter, who graduated from the US Naval Academy and served in the Navy on submarines. He also won the Nobel Peace Prize, for being instrumental in the only long-term peace agreement in the modern Middle East (the Camp David accords).

Or president John F. Kennedy, who served in the Navy in WW2. He was awarded the Navy and Marine Corps medal for his leadership on the last patrol of PT 109.

George McGovern was in the USAAF (15th Air Force) in WW2, flying 35 missions in B-24 bombers over North Africa and Italy. He was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Vice president Al Gore enlisted in the Army and served in Vietnam during that conflict, refusing a place in the Tennessee National Guard.

John Kerry served in the US Navy, volunteering for Vietnam duty. He was awarded three Purple Heart medals, a Silver Star and a Bronze Star. After his discharge from the military, he opposed the Vietnam War, having actually been there.

President Franklin Delano Roosevelt never served in any military, though he was appointed Assistant Secretary of the Navy. He led the USA out of the Depression and through almost all of WW2. His "New Deal" was considered rather liberal in its time....

It depends on what is considered "public" transportation.

Taxi companies and Greyhound are private enterprises, AFAIK. While they do not receive direct money from the government, their business is supported/facilitated by the government's use of tax money to build and maintain roads, bridges, tunnels, etc.

Most forms of transportation receive or have received some form of government support. Airlines don't build airports, trucking companies don't build roads, shipping companies don't dredge harbors, etc. Yes, their taxes and user fees help pay for those things, but those user fees and taxes are on a pay-as-you-go basis, and rarely pay for the entire cost.

This isn't a new thing - the Erie Canal wasn't built by private enterprise, and the construction of the transcontinental railroad was government funded - though the railroads paid back the construction cost many times over in the form of real estate and other taxes.

To quote Webster (New Collegiate Dictionary):

"a grant by a government to a private person or comapny to assist an enterprise deemed advantageous to the public" (emphasis added)

I recall no Middle East Peace in modern times.

Indeed he was.

A little before my time.

Odd. Do most people get to "refuse a place" in their state's National Guard?

I don't recall having that "opportunity." Ditto my brother.

Now there's a perfect example of disdain for his fellow military members.

Correct. He had polio and was unfit for military service.

> though he was appointed Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

Our military is civilian led. Sometimes led well, sometimes not.

He had a priori knowledge of Pearl Harbor and did nothing. That just might be considered disdain for the military and military members.

Extremely liberal. It was his handling of the Bonus Marchers, veterans of WW 1, that needed their promised pensions that might also be considered disdain for the military and military members.

Why? What did he say on the topic?

I thought the military was "cool" but only served in hot places.

Remember, Pipsquawk, your pal Len brought up the comparison of recruiting for the military and amateur radio.

Len, I'm a little confused about some IEEE matters. How do you justify a number of your posts in light of the IEEE Code of Ethics?

http://www.ieee.org/about/whatis/code.xml

I was puzzled when I read:

7. to seek, accept, and offer honest criticism of technical work, to acknowledge and correct errors, and to credit properly the contributions of others;

8. to treat fairly all persons regardless of such factors as race, religion, gender, disability, age, or national origin;

9. to avoid injuring others, their property, reputation, or employment by false or malicious action;

CRPF turns to basics to counter Maoists

By Indo Asian News Service

New Delhi, Sep 24 (IANS) India's largest paramilitary force is going back to basics, like using the old-fashioned Morse code, to overcome communication problems it faces when it goes after Maoists in forests, especially in Chhattisgarh.

Although Central Reserve Police Force (CRPF) officers are armed with mobile telephones and wireless systems, the personnel on the ground use the old-fashioned Morse code to communicate as other means of communication often fail due to territorial difficulties.

'We consider it the most dependable means of communication as it never fails and messages are easily sent across to seniors,' said an official leading the anti-Maoist operation in Chhattisgarh.

He said that hardly any modern infrastructure existed in the jungles and backward areas of Chhattisgarh but the Morse code worked without any problems.

'The personnel may be camping in the middle of a jungle but this system never fails,' the officer said, adding that the Morse code is also favoured because it can be converted into talking mode without much difficulty.

Although the force needs prior clearance from the Department of Communication Police Wireless (DCPW) to convert a high frequency device into talking mode, personnel combating Maoists in the jungles have been asked to convert without the clearance order.

'Some units who are posted in the affected areas have already started using this communication system,' the official said.

'We have applied to the home ministry for permission to convert these high frequency systems into talk modes and we hope it will be granted soon,' said the official.

CRPF personnel are also to be trained in using the global positioning system
(GPS) for communication.

'Though our men have been given these devices, not all of them are able to use it effectively due to lack of training and knowledge,' the official added.

The CRPF, along with the Chhattisgarh police, is to soon start a joint communication centre in Jagdalpur, one of the worst affected areas in the state because of unending Maoist violence.

'Our stress is to strengthen communication and intelligence in the interior areas of Chhattisgarh and Jharkhand where the Maoists are most active,' said J.K. Sinha, the director general of CRPF.

that I relayed from Telecom Digest back in 2002, and recommended as useful reading to our proposed moderation team.

Bottom line? Paul wants a "moderated" (translation...Censored) group that He, Paul will be in total control of.
Yes, as said by another, this proposed group will most likely consist of Paul and one or two others at most and I predict that the Newsgroup will not get off the ground.
Paul, do yourself a favor and double check your ego. To be blunt? Nobody really cares, Paul. Save for yourself.
I suggest you forge ahead with your proposed moderated group. Please do so! Then, after several weeks of nobody joining same, perhaps you will then come to the stark realization that nobody is interested and that you have no like-minded disciples.

But of course Paul is already aware of the above and my bet is that Paul will not proceed with his moderated group so as to spare himself any further embarrassment. Paul's proposal is akin to, I Gave A Party And Nobody Attended.

Don't give up the concept, Paul. There are many moderated forums worldwide. China has many, as do any number of one horse dictatorships around the globe. Yours won't be any different.

There's several modes that STUMP can operate in. It can always pass articles to a moderator for full review. It can also operate against a white-list of approved users and pass their articles on directly to the newsgroup without moderator intervention. STUMP has some sanity checking against forgeries and other inappropriate content, and this can be reinforced with other mail-filtering front-ends such as Procmail (not white-listing posts from known open/rogue news sites would be the main enhancement we would add).

The misc.kids.moderated team figured that if a poster was able to submit three unique, timely, and on-topic articles that would otherwise be approved by the moderation team based on other factors like civil tone and respect for others' opinions, then that person could be trusted to be white-listed in the future. Of course, there is always the option to yank that white-listing if there is future misbehavior. White-listed users would have to identify with what we reasonably believe to be an unforged "Last Name or Callsign."

Incorrigible users with demonstrated and ongoing records of simply not being able to respect, or debate fairly with, others could easily be locked out of the newsgroup. Their articles wouldn't even be considered by the newsgroup, as they would be bounced back without being viewed by a moderator. Such permanent blacklisting should only be done in exceptionally grave cases. We're contemplating starting everyone out with a "clean" record, then applying a sliding scale of warnings and temporary bans up to that ultimate penalty based on future behavior. Specifics will be in the RFD.

And of course, there would be the gray areas such as submitters who can contribute positively but need every article scrutinized for lapses, new submitters without an established three-article track record for white-listing, articles coming through open news servers such as Google Groups or aioe.org where the source cannot be reasonably authenticated by automated means, as well as other things that may require moderator review such as SPAM that got through other filters, off-topic submissions, etc. These will be directed to a queue for prompt review by a member of the moderation team. Over time, the gray area should get smaller and smaller, and thus our workload should reduce.

Probably some of things I mentioned in a previous reply to Len that rebutted his assertion that the "sole purpose" of the newsgroup was to debate Morse code testing:

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.policy/browse_thread/thread/3b366517f8849
0e/744a8a9165697020?lnk=st

In addition to the examples I mentioned, probably also the following:

- Where to fold in wider-band digital modes.

- Ongoing FCC attempts at mode-agnostic bandplanning, such as that put forward in RM 11306.

- How to do this without overruning the amateur radio bands with closed, proprietary systems being used as telecommunications substitutes, such as ocean sailors' use of WinLink 2000.

Peace agreement. Since those accords were signed more than 25 years ago, former enemies Israel and Egypt have had peace between them.

McGovern ran for President in 1972, but lost to Richard Nixon. Nixon later resigned because of the Watergate scandal, in which people operating for the Committee to REElect the President (known by the acronym CREEP) burglarized the DNC Hq to get information about the campaign.

McGovern's platform included a strong anti-Vietnam-war plank.

The Current Occupant had that opportunity - and took it. Most of the

How do Kerry's actions show disdain for his fellow military personnel?

He went to Vietnam, and fought in that war. He formed the conviction that the war was simply wrong, and that the USA should not be fighting it. When he returned to civilian life, he opposed that war - specifically, the policies of the politicians who gave the orders.

How was that "disdain for his fellow military members"? Should he have not said or done anything, even though he had formed the first-hand conviction that the war was wrong?

Conspiracy theory nonsense. Where's the proof?

> That just

The Japanese were able to pull off the Pearl Harbor attack because:

1) The US thought it was impossible for a sizable task force to form up and cross the Pacific without being detected.

2) Radar would spot any incoming attack. And it did - but those in charge ignored the warning from the radar station.

3) It was believed that the water of Pearl Harbor was too shallow for airplane-dropped torpedoes to be used. The Japanese developed torpedoes and attack methods that would work in the relatvely-shallow water. They also used dive bombing.

How?

The "Bonus Marchers" had been promised military pensions that would be paid in 1945, but they wanted the pensions 13 years early. (Can I have my retirement benefits 13 years early, please?)

Let's see what Wikipedia has to say, in http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Bonus_march

"The Bonus Army or Bonus March or Bonus Expeditionary Force was an assemblage of about 20,000 World War I veterans, their families, and other affiliated groups, who demonstrated in Washington, D.C. during the spring and summer of 1932 seeking immediate payment of a "bonus" granted by the Adjusted Service Certificate Law of 1924 for payment in 1945."

"The Bonus Army massed at the United States Capitol on June 17 as the U.S. Senate voted on the Patman Bonus Bill, which would have moved forward the date when World War I veterans received a cash bonus. Most of the Bonus Army camped in a Hooverville on the Anacostia Flats, then a swampy, muddy area across the Anacostia River from the federal core of Washington. The protesters had hoped that they could convince Congress to make payments that had been granted to veterans immediately, which would have provided relief for the marchers who were unemployed due to the Great Depression. The bill had passed the House of Representatives on June 15 but was blocked in the Senate."

Herbert Hoover was president in June 1932. FDR wasn't even elected until November 1932, and did not take office until 1933.

"After the defeat of the bill, Congress appropriated funds to pay for the marchers' return home, which some marchers accepted. On July 28, Washington police attempted to remove some remaining Bonus Army protesters from a federal construction site. After police fatally shot two veterans, the protesters assaulted the police with blunt weapons, wounding several of them. After the police retreated, the District of Columbia commissioners informed President Herbert Hoover that they could no longer maintain the peace, whereupon Hoover ordered federal troops to remove the marchers from the general area."

"The marchers were cleared and their camps were destroyed by the 12th Infantry Regiment from Fort Howard, Maryland, and the 3rd Cavalry Regiment under the command of MAJ. George S. Patton from Fort Myer, Virginia, under the overall command of General Douglas MacArthur. The Posse Comitatus Act, prohibiting the U.S. military from being used for general law enforcement purposes in most instances, did not apply to Washington, D.C. because it is one of several pieces of federal property under the direct governance of the U.S. Congress (United States Constitution, Article I. Section 8). Dwight D. Eisenhower, as a member of MacArthur's staff, had strong reservations about the operation. Troops carried rifles with unsheathed bayonets and tear gas were sent into the Bonus Army's camps. President Hoover did not want the army to march across the Anacostia River into the protesters' largest encampment, but Douglas MacArthur felt this was a communist attempt to overthrow the government."

" Hundreds of veterans were injured, several were killed, including William Hushka and Eric Carlson, a wife of a veteran miscarried, and other casualties were inflicted. The visual image of US armed soldiers confronting poor veterans of the recent great war set the stage for Veteran relief and eventually the Veterans Administration."

Neither of which existed at the time - but not due to alleged "liberal disdain for the military".

"By the end of the rout:
Two veterans had been shot and killed.
An 11 week old baby was in critical condition resulting from shock from gas exposure.
Two infants had died from gas asphyxiation.
An 11 year old boy was partially blinded by tear gas.
One bystander was shot in the shoulder.
One veteran's ear was severed by a Cavalry saber.
One veteran was stabbed in the hip with a bayonet.
At least twelve police were injured by the veterans.
Over 1,000 men, women, and children were exposed to the tear gas, including police, reporters, residents of Washington D.C., and ambulance drivers."

"The army burned down the Bonus Army's tents and shacks, although some reports claim that to spite the government, which had provided much of the shelter in the camp, some veterans torched their own camp dwellings before the troops could set upon the camp. Reports of U.S. soldiers marching against their peers did not help Hoover's re-election efforts; neither did his open opposition to the Bonus Bill due to financial concerns."

Were Hoover's actions towards the Bonus Marchers a sign of respect?

Herbert Hoover was president in the summer of 1932. Hoover opposed giving the veterans their bonus 13 years early.

FDR wasn't even elected until November 1932, and did not take office until 1933.

"After the inauguration of Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1933, some of the Bonus Army regrouped in Washington to restate its claims to the new President."

"Roosevelt did not want to pay the bonus early, either, but handled the veterans with more skill when they marched on Washington again the next year. He sent his wife Eleanor to chat with the vets and pour coffee for them, and he persuaded many of them to sign up for jobs making a roadway to the Florida Keys, which was to become the Overseas Highway, the southernmost portion of U.S. Route 1."

Instead of sending in the police, tear gas, and federal troops, like conservative Herbert Hoover, FDR sent Eleanor with coffee, and helped the vets find jobs.

Is that an example of "disdain"?

"A disastrous hurricane swept many of them and their flimsy barracks away in 1935."

Did FDR have 2 year advance notice of the hurricane, too?

"After seeing more newsreels of veterans giving their lives for a government that had taken them for granted, public sentiment built up so much that Congress could no longer afford to ignore it in an election year (1936). Roosevelt's veto was overridden, making the bonus a reality."

Is that 1936 veto the disdain you meant? How does that compare to the non-liberal method of sending in troops with guns, bayonets and fire.....

"It can be argued, however, that the Bonus Army's greatest accomplishment was actually the piece of legislation known as the G. I. Bill of Rights. Passed in 1944, it immensely helped veterans from the Second World War to secure needed assistance from the federal government to help them fit back into civilian life, something the World War I veterans of the Bonus Army had received very little of."

FDR was president in 1944.

> > "usual liberal disdain"?
> Yup.

Lessee....John Kerry acts on his convictions wrt Vietnam, and that's somehow disdain.

FDR sends in his wife rather than troops to deal with protesters, and that's disdain. He helps them get scarce CCC jobs, and that's disdain, too. But when Hoover had them attacked by police and federal troops, that wasn't disdain.

Is it disdain to send US military personnel to fight in a country because of weapons-of-mass-destruction that do not exist in that country?

Why the hell did he waste his time doing that? It isn't funny or entertaining at all. Dan needs to find more constructive ways of spending his time. Besides, that transmission wasn't really that bizarre for CB.

They are birds of a feather, Brian. The only difference between them is better literacy in Heil's postings. But, the same hatred of losing anything and bluffmanship is evident in both.

Heil is fixated on his one-cannot-possibly-talk-about-getting-into-amateur-radio until one is already in amateur radio. [the "chicken and the egg" arrived at the same time logic...]

Now the FCC does NOT require any commissioner or staffer to hold an amateur radio license grant in order to REGULATE US amateur radio. Heil's concept of who rules is faulty.

Heil often expresses disdain and contempt for anyone on the "outside" of amateur radio attempting to "tell radio amateurs what to do." That is also illogical and faulty but grounded in extreme emotional territorialism. He does NOT rule yet pretends to be the ruler in behavior to others.

The FCC tells Heil "what to do" and Heil has no choice but to obey...or lose his precious amateur extra class license. In any discussion with others about a singular test to ENTER amateur radio, Heil does not play well and assumes He can tell others what to do...and does not hesitate to do so with his typical smug arrogance.

That is NOT a good picture to present to the public about US amateur radio. But, I doubt that Heil cares. Heil has His and the rest can go do something else. :-(

The USMC imposter feels compelled to vent hate against all who disbelieve him. <shrug> Never mind that he has NEVER made available ANY third-party proof of his alleged 18-year USMC career. He feels that everyone "must" believe his words and never mind any proof.

Back in 1998-1999 on FCC 98-143 ("Reconstruction NPRM)
there DID exist a licensed radio amateur named Leonard H. Anderson...but his mailing address was in Montana, not California where I've been since 1956.

When I checked QRZ under AB8O, the bio page was there but all response data had been deleted. Why I have no idea.
One will have to ask John (AB8O, "Jawod") about that.

Out of curiosity last year (two years ago?) I did a Search for my name. It is somewhat common, surname certainly, given name slightly. Interesting results:

A USMC Major (a real one) with the Navy's Blue Angels was named Leonard Anderson. :-) Think about that:
USMC, a real commissioned officer, and good enough to fly as part of the Blue Angels! Kind of beats this "CAP Captain" posing in a used poopy suit with snot on his moustache. Poor CAP man is only single-engine rated yet loved to say he was "pilot in command!" :-)

There was a black actor in an entertainment registry named Leonard Anderson. Buff, hunky guy maybe 30. There was a white music teacher named Leonard Anderson, maybe coming up on 50, not a "hunk" but appreciated by his school and community.

A quick name search at QRZ this morning turns up three licensed US radio amateurs named Leonard Anderson, but none of them have the same middle initial.

Now all that is really irrelevant except to members of the morseketeers in here, namely Heil. In order not to offend his apparent sensibilities, one MUST have a valid amateur radio license in order to talk about obtaining an amateur radio license! That is to avoid "telling him what to do!" :-)

NB: NO ONE can tell Heil what to do. He tells all others what to do. :-)

This is all so hilarious! :-)

Heil will not. He seems to think he must defend this "Jim" by attacking all who THREATEN "Jim." "Threat" being in Heil's praise on this "Jim."

Yes, they are what you say, Brian.

>Nobody's interested in radiotelegraphy.

Actually, the olde-tymers seem to love it...especially those who gave up learning the technical side of amateur radio some 30 to 40 years back. Radiotelegraphy reminds them of their youth and youthful dreams of being "top-notch radio ops" of the 1930s in the 1960s.

Most true! But, the imposter is going to continue with his lying until this newsgroup becomes moderated. But, from Paul Schleck's information bulletin, WE can't call him a liar any more! That will "violate" some "rules" (of engagement or whatever) wherein no one can speak nasty of others. Doesn't matter if they are military imposters, we won't be able to say much of anything against such posturing liars. It's not "nice."

Nor I. Maybe it was for one weekend or something.

The military draft ended January 1973 under Nixon's watch.
Jimmy had no worries about being drafted after that.

However, Carter pardoned most Vietnam War draft evaders in January 1977. Way too liberal an act for my taste.

Jimmy still didn't volunteer to serve then.

>> Or president John F. Kennedy, who served in the Navy in WW2. He was >Indeed he was.

JFK approved the Bay of Pigs fiasco in Cuba.

JFK also brought us perilously close to World War III in the Cuban Missle crisis. The first casualty was a U-2 pilot surnamed Anderson.

Jimmy was too young to serve then.

>> George McGovern was in the USAAF (15th Air Force) in WW2, flying 35

Well before Jimmy's time, too. However, McGovern didn't get elected to national office.

It must be a Tennessee thing. Or Jimmy is confused between National Guard and State Guard. Jimmy never volunteered for any Guard.

It probably cost him the presidential election. Kerry once tossed his medals. Maybe Robesin caught one? :-)

Agreed.

Not quite. US cryptanalysts had decoded the infamous Japanese multi-part telegram before the Japanese embassy in DC did. It just didn't have any mention of the attack point.

>That just
>might be considered disdain for the military and military members.

Neither. The US cryptanalysts were a small group of USA and USN personnel on active duty, plus the genius of a civilian, William Friedman, the Army's chief cryptanalyst.

Jimmy couldn't help them with a morse code book...he wasn't born yet.

>> His "New Deal" was considered rather liberal in its time....
>Extremely liberal. It was his handling of the Bonus Marchers, veterans >considered disdain for the military and military members.

That was a not-good situation.

The FCC was created under FDR's term. The jury might still be out on that one. :-)

>> "usual liberal disdain"?
>Yup.

Brian, you have to watch out for Jimmy. He wants to "set the stage" and then only argue about His stage settings. When someone else pops in with something different, they are "wrong" or "incorrect." :-)

A plain and simple fact: NO USA President NOR president wanna-be since Herbert Hoover has been granted an amateur radio license. Why Jimmy picked only those presidents and wanna-bes is rather strange.

Here's a plain and simple fact for Jimmy (who might not get out much these days): There are still millions of Americans who are anti-war, anti-military NOW. The news services just haven't featured them much since 11 Sep 01. They are still there, can be found. Jimmy is one of those that are more quiet, snarling only when provoked but otherwise holding to his precious, elite self with his strange (sometimes insulting) opinions.

Here's some more plain and simple facts: Jimmy never served any military in any capacity. Jimmy never served any government in any capacity. He never took that Oath that all us veterans took...but he thinks he "serves his country" by having a hobby license in an amateur radio service. So do some others who can't think for themselves but require the League to tell them what to think.

He sure can't. Well, we gotta cut him some slack. It might be some kind of shell shock he suffered in a "country at war."

"Incoming! Incoming! Hey, Heil, lots of Marsgrams incoming!"

Do all amateur radio license applicants have to swear an oath to defend the US Constitution? With their LIVES if necessary?

I think Heil got a bit too delusional there...

Millions of them, really. The descendants of the "hell no, we won't go" generation...the "anti-war" people with their "peace" symbols. They've quieted down a bit after 11 Sep 01...or the press has quit featuring them on video news.

Heil doesn't get out much, apparently. He might go over to Jimmy's house to admire all his things, though, just like Jimmy's other friend and neighbor.

Wow! Did Heil get a medal for meritorious guard standing?

Oh, yes, Heil was "IN" a country at war! Did he directly engage "Charlie?" Get in lots of firefights? Or just fights?

Just as well. Heil was unlikely to win any...

Yes, I know Jimmy is too chicken to go to one. He might actually LEARN something and NOT tell everyone "you are wrong!" :-)

But, the Korporal uf ze Guard thinks I made a "THREAT!" :-)

Wow! Think of that: A no-code-test advocate "threatening" one of the famous morseketeers!

Only AFTER appropriate military action by the Judge Advocate General Corps and one of two possible courts martial (not the third, the highest one).

Heil hasn't touched on our angry USMC imposter's father's alleged "recruiting" for the Army AFTER he got out of the USN.
Odd, considering said imposter is also an amateur extra morseman...

I had been on ebray since they billed via postal mail and gave $10.00 credit to start you out.

Recently I had the wonderful experience of having paid my ebay via Payless Pal and when I went to pay the small bill.. a few bucks. THEY made an 8 cent error in the bill transfer and so I figured they would just bill it on the next months cycle.

BUT! What they did was to debit a closed bank account.

I had opened a checking account to get a Payless Pal account and closed it so my real money was never in jeopardy. So what the idiots had done then was to bill me an additional $15.00 for a bounced debit they should have never made.

In the mean time ebray has gotten so big I could not get any 'Real response from a Real person' Like dealing with the government! I could find no Phone number to call and explain THEIR ERROR.

I just kept getting junk Spam replies from ebray.

It makes them feel good telling me I can not use ebray. pftpftpft!

So I have since closed my ebray account.

AND my Payless Pal account a soon as I heard ebray had bought them.

For several months ebray kept billing me with additional "late charges"

HA HA ebray and Payless Pal get stuffed!

All over 8 cents they have lost a lot more than that in business since I am also disabled and did shop over 100 items on ebray. It WAS convenient to use and not walk through so many flea markets and hamfests. My rating WAS over 98%

Couldn't please everyone, and some sent me junk from trash cans smell and all . lol

Thanks for the vent.. off my soap box now and shopping elsewheres. :-p

You afe thed expert at hiding and beating off, Lardass. Why did you just show up at the Huntsviulle hamfest as they were closing? Why didn't you show at Dalton hamfest when you said you would? Why did you hide behind your HUD apartment door and piss yourself when Oris stopped by?

I happened to be traveling through Huntsville, Alabama early this morning, I deceided to stop in Athens and see just how tough Lloyd Davies was going to act when he saw me in person.

Many of you know that a few years ago, Lloyd got smart with several people in the Deja Newsgroup (now Google) and I issued a challenge to him. I told him I would be attending the Dalton, Ga. Hamfest if he wanted to continue the conversation. He said he would be there and he was going to kick my ass.

Well, Lloyd was a no-show and continued the verbal assault on the newsgroups. He always talks tough behind his keyboard. And, I understand he is now doing the same sort of thing on the NIM Busters Board.

Well, about 8.35 this morning (December 23, 2004) I located his apartment in a nasty looking section of town. I'm a pretty good sized man, but I put my gun in my back waistband after exiting the car. I located his apartment and knocked on the door. The doorbell was missing and bare wires were sticking out of the wall. I heard someone say I'm coming and shortly the door opened with a safety chain lock still engaged. He asked what I wanted and I introduced myself and asked if we could have a conversation. He turned white as a sheet and attempted to slam the door, but I already had a foot wedged in the opening. He started shaking uncontrollably and was shouting leave me alone, leave me alone! I told him he didn't seem so tough now face to face and then noticed a putrid odor of urine and he was pissing his pants and crying like a baby. Please leave me alone Oris he said, I was just having fun and meant no harm, please leave, please. I could see the filthy floor of this apartment and the dirty floors and the stench of a grown man pissing on himself were almost enough to make me want to vomit, and I don't have a queasy stomach. Upon telling him that this time he would escape a ass kicking and not to ever get a smart mouth with me again and a verbal yes from him, I departed. That apartment complex looked like a crackhouse, niggers everywhere, filthy grounds and stairwells. Junk cars everywhere and garbage overflowing the garbage cans.

I'm sending this to a friend who despises Lloyd Davies and he wanted to post it for everyone to see just what kind of chickenshit asshole this Davies really is.

Oris Grim

Markie has too mooch off his elderly daddy and shemale wife, Markie couldn't afford the gas money for such a trip.

BWHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHA Billy fucks up again! He is well "experienced" at doing that, though.

BILLY SMITH STEPS ON HIS OWN DICK THUSLY WITH THESE FUCK-UPS:

<VfQHf.14581$rH5.8121@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"That's interesting there idiot. I bet you really did flunk high school math and probably elementary too. Oh thats right, wasn't that when was in Floriduh. Spelled Florida but the DUH is for your Dumb Ass."

"wasn't that when was in Floriduh" - Billy makes good fuck up!

Billy "shoots" himself in his palsied club foot once again in Message-ID <Q0bJf.19641$vU2.7735@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Roger, shots himself in the foot"

Billy the "Rhodes" scholar fucks up again and even demonstrates he is an imbecile in <8uqwg.8275$vO.7632@newsread4.news.pas.earthlink.net>:
"Right you are, wannabe Rhode's Scholar!"

Billy the illiterate retard Smith screws up again, and his illiteracy is exposed. "It serves him right."
in<hauKf.1410$S25.940@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Deserves him right."

Billy "retard" Smith confesses to his generally accepted retarded status in <LwpLf.2321$F56.2317@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"I'm a general retard. bwhahaha"

Billy "spelling champ of the general retards" Smith admits his bad hygiene but is still in denial about his English skills in <QxpLf.2322$F56.1169@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net>
"Sure I can spell and smell."

"Billy" the NOtwordSmith fucks up again with this incompete sentence in <qgyNf.5576$S25.341@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"So when you got divorced boy, did your finally figure out that your more"

Billy "cumgargler" Smith managed to awaken from his drunken stupor to slobber
in <fbIOf.442$sL2.25@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Isn't that you mom weighed"

Mr."Education" Billy Smith steps on his own dick again when he talks about others' "educations" (or educatiion" as he spells it) in <w7IOf.436$sL2.167@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Uh, huh. Right LOSER. Still smoking that dope again? By the way how is your so called educatiion actually doing for you? Those online classes."

<B9IOf.439$sL2.255@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"You're whole life has been exhaled before."

Billy "illiterate retard" Smith spikes the "HUH?" factor in this slobbering in <MGqUf.16833$S25.8455@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Come on, do it just have you some spiked Kool Aid."

"Didn't" your special-Ed teacher teach you how to spell, Billy?
in <OCqUf.16826$S25.10695@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"...didnt Marie teach you to play nice"

"Rhodes scholar" Billy Lardass Davies Smith blunders and blows his cover again in <Et%0g.6340$sq5.1769@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Rhode's scholar Scheissman blows his cover again."

Billy "dumbass" Smith steps on his own tiny dick when he tries to criticize others' typos,but he doesn't "perform" well as usual with his blatant "stupidity" in <oCk1g.5958$Es3.3907@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Noteed!!!!!!!!!!!!! Bwhahahahahahah. You're a brilliant one Scheissman.
You even peform stupid acts on your blatant stupidty"

Billy "dropout Lardass" Smith steps on his own dick when he tries to comment on others' spelling abilities, but he "can't" do any better in Message-ID: <mQr3g.8970$sq5.4914@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Woger cant spell very well anyway."

Billy "dropout pizza BOY" Smith fucks up his sentence again when he blathered in <WdZfg.629$lp.259@newsread3.news.pas.earthlink.net>:
"How about those retest letter you received for jamming."

Billy "illiterate " Smith claims to have been in the Library, but he can't even spell "I've" correctly, maybe Billy should check out the English tutoring books there in WpFgg.1310$lf4.1288@newsread1.news.pas.earthlink.net>:
"Ive been to quite a few libraries on Sunday and a lot of them are open."

Billy Smith "the" ill-educated moron fucks up again in <4zxLg.15720$Qf.5115@newsread2.news.pas.earthlink.net>:
"Roger is about to finally have th final episode where..."

I did, and there are enough holes in your "webcam lie" to drive a Mack truck through.
All your backpedaling and excuses for your lie that you were caught making won't change the fact you made up the whole "webcam" thing. The webcam surely must be on during the daytime, and if there was indeed one you would be able to tell us the make and color of Roger's car. He doesn't go to the Shipwreck Lounge, and he sure wouldn't drive there. Looks like you are just the least reliable information source of the internet.
Saggytits Lee (Stagger Lee@houston-hunks.com) fails to back up his "webcam story" when he changes the subject with lame excuses when asked what type of car Roger drives and it's color in <night.vision.woger@houston-hunks.com>:
"Those newer webcams include automatic switchover to night vision mode when it gets dark, but the pictures are in that typical blue-green monochrome mode, and it's tough to make out fine details."

The USMC Imposter doesn't know lie from truth...keeps stalling and stalling and stalling on providing any proof of his fabled "seven hostile actions" 18-year "military career."

This USMC Imposter just doesn't know lie from truth anymore.

He's had years to work up some kind of proof of his mighty military accomplishments yet all he does is act all disturbed-angry-petulant-insulted when he can't produce any proof of his own claims. A real head case...who claims to be a "healthcare professional." I worry for the patients who come into contact with this Imposter.

So was the Christian cross, but then they were killing in the name of religion.
The Celtic cross on his door is a symbol of his ancestors, looks like happened to be traveling through Huntsville, Alabama early this morning, I deceided to stop in Athens and see just how tough Lloyd Davies was going to act when he saw me in person.

Many of you know that a few years ago, Lloyd got smart with several people in the Deja Newsgroup (now Google) and I issued a challenge to him. I told him I would be attending the Dalton, Ga. Hamfest if he wanted to continue the conversation. He said he would be there and he was going to kick my ass.

Well, Lloyd was a no-show and continued the verbal assault on the newsgroups. He always talks tough behind his keyboard. And, I understand he is now doing the same sort of thing on the NIM Busters Board.

Well, about 8.35 this morning (December 23, 2004) I located his apartment in a nasty looking section of town. I'm a pretty good sized man, but I put my gun in my back waistband after exiting the car. I located his apartment and knocked on the door. The doorbell was missing and bare wires were sticking out of the wall. I heard someone say I'm coming and shortly the door opened with a safety chain lock still engaged. He asked what I wanted and I introduced myself and asked if we could have a conversation. He turned white as a sheet and attempted to slam the door, but I already had a foot wedged in the opening. He started shaking uncontrollably and was shouting leave me alone, leave me alone! I told him he didn't seem so tough now face to face and then noticed a putrid odor of urine and he was pissing his pants and crying like a baby. Please leave me alone Oris he said, I was just having fun and meant no harm, please leave, please. I could see the filthy floor of this apartment and the dirty floors and the stench of a grown man pissing on himself were almost enough to make me want to vomit, and I don't have a queasy stomach. Upon telling him that this time he would escape a ass kicking and not to ever get a smart mouth with me again and a verbal yes from him, I departed. That apartment complex looked like a crackhouse, niggers everywhere, filthy grounds and stairwells. Junk cars everywhere and garbage overflowing the garbage cans.

This Lloyd is nothing more than white trash that delivers pizzas and could afford to take a trip out of town if the ticket cost $5.00.

I'm sending this to a friend who despises Lloyd Davies and he wanted to post it for everyone to see just what kind of chickenshit asshole this Davies really is.

And on 16 May 1999, the love of my life, My Precious Taelor, died in her sleep. Taelor was my third daughter and was born with severe birth defects and expected to not live past age two. I kept her for five years, eleven months, three weeks and one day. " from K4yz Bio on QRZ

frankly that sounds rather strange and vaguely sickening but after Steve instance on label other pedophiles one does have to that he listed his dead daughter (the 3rd) as the love of his life, not his current wife and stve will go and and about it butI took his statement and simply aplied the sort of twist he does then we watch him dance

OK so far - all ways that reduce the number of posts a moderator has to read.

It seems to me that such a complex system would be needed for groups with lots of different contributors. Does rrap really have that many people reading it?

Regardless of the original purpose of rrap, its charter has broadened to meet the name "policy"

Seems the right direction to me.

It also seems to me that such a moderated group could exist in parallel with rrap as we know it today. Let those who do not want moderation have their unmoderated forum, and those who can live with the moderation rules have theirs.

little else is worth ntoing and as should be obvious very little else will get done by steve will all he has to do is STOP lying stoping claiming my wife is male stop calling me a child molestor

stop acussing me of welfare fraud

stop using libelous accusations against others to harrass them apologize for calling my DAD a rapist apologize for lying about the non existance of the 47th my old unit apologize for lying about the non existance of the 214 fa of which it was part

since steve will no doubt try to ja this message it will be repated a

You must not have noticed the 75+ messages he posted since this morning, perhaps more. My kill filter only kills Mark's posts, plus anything coming from taranews, and it racked up a big kill count when I entered rrap. Earlier in the morning, it didn't register any kills.

It looks like he still has direcpc.

I guess he got a weekend away from jail. That gives him more time to flood usenet and jam on 20 meters, except that his 20M signal is so weak from that valley that nobody can hear him.

James Earl Carter SERVED the USN, Jimmy. He IS a veteran.
Of all living presidents he served the military the longest.

Jimmy has never served the US military. Brian has, I have,
but Jimmy has NOT.

Here's some Presidents who ARE/WERE military veterans
since I've been alive: Harry Truman (WW1), Dwight Eisenhower, John Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford, Jimmy Carter, George H.W. Bush (the elder).

Bill Clinton is NOT. Shrub was in the National Guard but wanted to be a "war leader."

None of them have been granted amateur radio licenses.

A plain and simple fact: The "Middle East" is NOT confined to Israel and Egypt.

Another plain and simple fact: There has NOT been
"peace" in the MIDDLE EAST since 1948.

Jimmy has an amateur radio license. Jimmy never served.
Jimmy never volunteered. Jimmy will never serve.

>> He had a priori knowledge of Pearl Harbor and did nothing.
>Conspiracy theory nonsense. Where's the proof?

The "proof" is in hundreds of pages of testimony before a congressional committee following the end of WW2. The USA did have prior knowledge that an attack by Japan was imminent...Army-Navy cryptanalysts did decode the infamous telegram the Japanese diplomats were to deliver to the USA before the Japanese Embassy code clerks could decode and type up their copy.

The English translation of that multi-part telegram can be found in several textbooks available in public libraries. The US Government Printing Office printed up the entire testimony of the Congressional Committee.
NO "conspiracy theory nonsense" in that.

>>The "Bonus Marchers" had been promised military pensions that would be >>paid in 1945, but they wanted the pensions 13 years early. (Can I

Jimmy will never march as a VETERAN. Jimmy only marches to the beat of morse code. Jimmy never served. Jimmy never volunteered to serve. Jimmy will never serve.

Jimmy serves his country by having an amateur radio license.

>Herbert Hoover was president in the summer of 1932. Hoover opposed >giving the veterans their bonus 13 years early.

Didn't Herbert Hoover have an amateur radio license?

Hoover's birthplace is now a national park. My wife and I have been there. It is preserved intact in before-the-1900-year state. Quaint. A better quaintness than manual telegraphy mode, though...no telegraphy station is visible at that park.

>FDR wasn't even elected until November 1932, and did not take office >until 1933.

FDR initiated the FCC with the Communications Act of 1934.
A copy of the letter to Congress can be found at the FCC website. 1932 is SEVENTY-FOUR YEARS AGO, Jimmy.

>Is that 1936 veto the disdain you meant? How does that compare to the >non-liberal method of sending in troops with guns, bayonets and >fire.....

Jimmy doesn't know guns or bayonets. Jimmy never served at any time. Jimmy has never volunteered to serve. Jimmy will never serve.

Jimmy thinks all can be solved by some coffee and chatting?

Gosh, and a licensed radio amateur did the thing with the "guns and bayonets?" How awful..."threats!"

>FDR was president in 1944.

1944 is SIXTY-TWO YEARS AGO, Jimmy.

US Amateur radio operations were forbidden in 1944.

>Is it disdain to send US military personnel to fight in a country >because of weapons-of-mass-destruction that do not exist in that >country?

Would Jimmy prefer Shrub sending in Laura with coffee and friendly chatting with Saddam Hussein? Would Saddam get a "bonus?"

Why Jimmy get all hot and bothered about CURRENT EVENTS?

Jimmy has never served in the military. Jimmy has never volunteered for any military service. Jimmy is not a military veteran. Jimmy will never be a military veteran.

Jimmy serves his country by being an amateur extra morseman, fighting terrorists with his code key. Jimmy doesn't like no-code-test advocate veterans accusing him of disdain for the military. Jimmy is superior because of his hobby "service."

Jimmy angry over not receiving "subsidy" for his "service?"

So you closed a bank account and didn't tell PayPal? This whole mess is your fault.

eBay is the best. I've bought hundreds of items worth many thousands of dollars. Most of it could never be found locally for the same price.
Anytime I'm looking to buy anything, I look at eBay first.

What did you expect from the Archaic Radiotelegraphy Society (ARS) ?

>> I hope the FCC wil soon get of it duff do it job and let Nodocde ars >> try to repair the damage of "pur Beters"

The "betters" (amateur extra morsemen) say "it isn't broke, doesn't need fixing." US amateur radio below 30 MHz seems to be made for the amateur extra morsemen...natuarlly they don't want a thing altered in there...they have a "home" at the lower end of all HF bands, claim they "own" it. At least one thinks he is chief of Zoning there, gets mad when his comparison to real living is destroyed. <shrug>

The FCC has a lot to do with regulating ALL US civil radio. It will get around to ruling on last year's NPRM when it wants to. We have to be patient with the FCC. Not to worry, the ARRL and amateur extra morsemen think they are running US amateur radio. :-)

amusing whnen Robeson types that I am a rapist it isn't hurtfull

when he types MY fathr is rapist that is ok too

when he type My wife is male that is also no problem

child molestor nothing hurtfull there any extra can say these thigngs about ME but if I daere QUOTE a parcular statement of an extra I " ..am only thinking about how to hurt someone"

wwell that just isn't so

Id rather not have to remind Robeson that 2 (or more) can play that game. Id prefer civl discourse but that is impossible with someone that has been calling you a childmolestor for some time now

if Robeson would like to avoid uch reminders he knows what to do

The Camp David Accords, Len.

Israel was on one side and Egypt on the other. The Camp David Accords, signed by Egypt and Israel, have brought peace between those two countries for almost 30 years.

A draft could always be reinstated.

That amnesty/pardon was specific to draft resistance.

By contrast, president Gerald Ford issued a general pardon to Richard Nixon some years earlier, covering anything Nixon had done while in office.

> Way too liberal an act for my taste.

Was it OK for Ford to pardon Nixon? Particularly since Nixon's pardon was so general and nonspecific?

And then backed out. Bad decision.

Soon after the Bay of Pigs, NASA put the first American into space, and JFK made his 'go to the moon' speech. Some people think one of the reasons JFK did that was to move attention away from that mess.

> JFK also brought us perilously close to World War III in

Was that U-2 pilot any relation to you, Len?

Did JFK show "disdain" for the military by the Bay of Pigs or the Cuban Missile crisis?

How should he have handled the Cuban situation, Len?

The dirty tricks of Nixon's CREEP may have had something to do with that. The efforts by "the President's men" to cover up some of those dirty tricks eventually brought about the downfall of Nixon's presidency. Nixon resigned rather than be impeached, because the evidence against him was so strong that even his own party could not support him.

McGovern ran on a platform that included a strong anti-Vietnam-war plank. Was that showing "disdain" for the military?

There is no requirement that any government official actually serve in the military, yet they decide what wars will be fought.

Is it disdain for the military to say that sometimes their decisions aren't the best?

What did the telegram say, exactly?

Which situation?

The violent confrontation between the Bonus Marchers and federal troops occurred in the summer of 1932 - when Herbert Hoover was president.

FDR was not elected until November of 1932, and did not take office until 1933.

Who exhibited greater disdain for those veterans - Hoover or FDR?

The FCC was the successor to the FRC. Both were created to deal with the mess of regulation - or misregulation - of the 1920s and earlier.

Incorrect.

Herbert Hoover was not a radio amateur. His son was.

Barry Goldwater, Republican presidential candidate in 1964, was an active radio amateur. (K7UGA)

> There are still millions of Americans

Anti-war and anti-military are two different things.

Is it always wrong to oppose a war, regardless of the circumstances?

Are all wars "right" if the administration in charge at the time says so?

Well, you can't be talking about me, Len. Because I've never written anything remotely like that.

It's not about me.

What I have written is that the Amateur Radio Service performs service to the country.

What I have asked is whether the only way someone can serve their country is by uniformed military service, or if someone can serve in other ways.

Those are valid questions. Try answering them, rather than making up quotes.

Which "League". Len? The League of Women Voters? The Union League?

So you keep on with your hundreds of posts, idiot. And while posting your childish drivel perhaps it would behoove you to apologize to Steve. You certainly owe him that.

Careful, Mark, we can't say such things due to "threats" against the pro-coders. :-) They are muy touchy about threats against Them.

Well, Mark, it is like this: Some of those who have the cool HOBBY of amateur radio think they are "servicemen" in the "service of their country" for having that hobby. We can't say nasty to them because that is not "nice." They rank themselves as equivalent to soldiers, sailors, and airmen.

They want the ILLUSION that they are doing great and meritorious SERVICE. Especially the morseketeers. That is important to them. The illusion, that is. Screw the reality part of it, that doesn't apply to them (they think).

Never mind that US amateur radio licensee numbers are holding static with a slight downturn over the past three years. Oldsters are signing off permanently and newcomers are going in through the no-code-test Technician class. Most of the latter are STAYING no-code. [General Of The Amateurs Miccolis says otherwise but then he loves cooking the stats to suit his own taste]

As time goes on with the code test gone, the amateur bands WILL change. But, it will be slow since humans are living longer now. Human attrition will, nonetheless, happen. Oldsters don't want to think about that but it is inevitable to all of us. The oldsters want to preserve the illusion that they are still "young," believing in the old, antiquated ways they were impressed with. Why some even believe they are a "service to the country" by having that hobby.

There's no argument with those ancient morseketeers, certainly no "discussion." To them, all must be preserved. [read mummified] Ptui.

I've never claimed to be the world's greatest anything. You and Len

I can't believe a grown man would act like that. Sounds like what kids used to do when playing on the CB radio. When I was in High School CB was popular and we talked on it a lot. One kid ran illegal power and tried to block everyone elses transmissions (played music and strange noises and cussed people out). His Dad got a letter from the FCC and he got his CB taken away as well as his car. Too bad we can't do that with adults.

You've talked. You've commented to the FCC. You've commented, ranted, railed and have generally acted like a small child here. What next?

No one at any state's DMV needs hold a drivers license. You don't work at the DMV or the FCC.

You don't regulate. You aren't a radio amateur. You have no stake in amateur radio.

I'm fully aware that I don't "rule" amateur radio. I'm fully aware that the FCC does "rule" amateur radio. I'm fully aware that you aren't the FCC or a radio amateur.

> The FCC tells Heil "what to do" and Heil has no choice

When it comes to amateur radio, you are not bound by FCC regulations unless you decide to take to the air illegally.

I'm quite happy to observe the regulations governing amateur radio in this country. I've received not as much as a single warning letter from the FCC in nearly 43 years.

You aren't entering amateur radio.

I've encountered no sane person posting here who plays less well with others than Leonard H. Anderson.

Tell you what to do, Len? I've not ordered you to obtain an amateur radio license or not to obtain an amateur radio license. I've not told you to comment to the FCC or not to comment to the FCC. If you don't like my "smug arrogance", change your own tactics.

Len, why don't you address the IEEE Code of Ethics?

> Heil

Anyone who chooses to obtain an amateur radio license may do so without any interference from me. You've been braying in this newsgroup for better than a decade. You have not made an attempt to obtain an amateur radio license. I had nothing to do with your failure to do so. You're a victim of inertia.

You don't have an amateur radio license. I have taken no action in attempting to prevent you from posting here. I have taken no action to preclude your comments to the FCC. Therefore, your statement is false. I am not bound to accept your often outrageous statements without responding. Ridiculing you or laughing at you is not forbidden. Deal with it.

It isn't so, Len. Jim and I are friends. We remain friends despite our lack of agreement on politics. Jim acts civilly, tells a good story and has a great sense of humor.

> It is like they are "joined" somehow.

both have Mark Morgan agreeing with you to the best of his abilities.

This "Jim" thinks rationally and acts rationally. This "Len" does not often display those traits.

Amateur Extras certainly hold the top license in amateur radio. They must answer only to the FCC so, in that sense, they can't be told what to do by others. You don't like anything you perceive as "elite" and you certainly don't like those who consider you a sidewalk superintendent.

Nope... closed account ebray opened with that was used long ago.
Was active via Payless Pal till they made a mess of it all so I closed that account so they couldn't rob me just for THEIR 8 cents MISTAKE. Plus their withdraw penalty, plus their late fees. UGH!
Had they replied with an 8 cent request there was more than 8 cents in my Payless pal account at the time. Just as reasonable as the Gvnmt LOL

Just the same as auto deposit from anyplace... they have access to get what ever they want and you have to litigate it to get your own money back.
Being on SS disab' I'd starve before I got my money back if any were taken.
I never trust them with my whole paycheck.... I wonder why anyone does.
Oh!.... That's so they can get in the news by being e-robbed. Phished etc.

Good luck Y'all

I also keep my Norton AV etc up to date and turned on ALLWAYS

Dave and I are friends, too. We remain friends despite our lack of agreement on some political issues. Dave acts civilly, tells a good story and has a great sense of humor. The Jimmy Carter comment was a classic.

> > so then how do you 2 remain friends

It's really very simple:

Our friendship is not based on absolute agreement on every subject.
Rather it is based on mutual respect and tolerance for differing points of view. Differences are dealt with by looking at the issues rather than attacking the other person over his name, ethnicity, religion, geographic location, education, etc., just because he disagrees on only after you have threatened my murder arest been harrasing me for 8 years accusing me a being a rapist child molestor accusing my father of being a rapist and Fatherin law of being a molestor my mother of being a prostitute

after that I certainly feel right at home poking their after you daughter is dead and beyond any harm unlike your wife and living daughters

The new-timers aren't interested, except the new ones who say they are just to keep the peace with the oldsters who will give you hell for not being interested in the Morse Code.

I think I once paralleled St Thomas Aquinas' 4 paths to believing in God with why you should believe in Morse Code.

Robesin is what he is. Not being able to verbalize that won't change a thing. He'll still be a dispicable piece of excrement, and others will see him for what he is.

I'd guess this varies from location to location but:

Probably the topic most often heard here is digital... Interfacing, coordinating IPs, hooking the system into the Internet, configuring operating systems, and getting some one's station to work in the system.

Lots of discussions on antennas which is pretty much the same as years gone by.

We have cats, one of which is bigger than some dogs and I've seen him tackle a black lab about five times his size and win. They don't crap on the carpet, but do tend to barf up the mouse they caught which is particularly nice when you are just sitting down to breakfast.

On average, I think the technical discussions go deeper now than when I first got on. OTOH people are people. When driving we comment on traffic. When hung over we tend to ... well...never mind.<:-)) So topics other than the technical ones are pretty much the same whether now or then.

Saw some last Thursday night on my way to the rifle club meeting. They had a bunch of little white chrosses in their front yard and were waving "Bush Lied" signs at the side of the road.

Amazing that Robesin can post "slashed tires, rocks through windows, and terrorized wives" and there's no mention of a "silly threat." But you suggest that a military recruiter might pummel Jim for saying something stoopid that gets noticed and characterized as a threat to Jim. Hi!

I STILL DON'T BELIEVE YOU.

You don't get drafted into the Guard, then "refuse" and go active-duty instead. It just doesn't work that way, now or then.

You can join the Guard, the Reserves, or Active Service. Or in 1972, you could get drafted into the Active Service ONLY.

It was not Kerry's remarks about how well the war was being run, it was his remarks about the people he served with that shows disdain for the military and military members.

Fair enough. But it still doesn't excuse your liberal disdain for the military.

Yes. Look at the content of his testimony.

Fair enough. But there's still Pearl Harbor.

Saddam had years to move his WMDs as he kept rejecting and ejecting the inspectors while Clinton looked the other way.

He spent a decade sending up SAMs at US aircraft enforcing the no-fly zone. He plotted an assassination of a US President. Then there were the atrocities against his own people, and the abuses of the oil for food and medicine program.

That alone should have prompted Clinton to act, but he didn't.

Ah, but Heil has NOT answered his illogical stance on WHO may comment or otherwise talk about amateur radio regulations.

>You've commented, ranted,

Now, now, you are beginning to act angry and petulant again. :-)

>No one at any state's DMV needs hold a drivers license.

WRONG. Driving inspectors MUST hold valid drivers licenses in Illinois and California.

>You don't work at the DMV or the FCC.

Clear something up for us: Do you REQUIRE that anyone work at a Department of Motor Vehicles in order to talk and discuss US amateur radio regulations?!?

A most irrational statement you made.

Here's a plain and simple fact: The FCC does NOT require any commissioner or staffer to be granted amateur radio licenses in order to regulated US civil radio. Really.

>You don't regulate.

Regulate WHAT? There are many many things that I regularly regulate. :-) US civil radio regulations are NOT something I regulate.

>You aren't a radio amateur.

True, but what DOES that have to do with talking about
US amateur radio regulations?

>You have no stake in amateur radio.

Now, now, Count Dracula, don't get worried. :-)

Tsk, you are still angry and petulant. NOT a good attitude.

YOU are an amateur extra but YOU do NOT regulate US amateur radio. The FCC does that, grants amateur radio licenses, shuts down amateur radio stations for rules violations, can even establish federal fines for such violations.

>I'm fully aware that I don't "rule" amateur radio.

You don't rule there. You don't regulate amateur radio.

>I'm fully aware that the FCC does "rule" amateur radio.

Are you SURE about that? You vacillate back and forth so much...

Remarkable 'awareness!' Do you think that will get you a cookie? :-)

Tsk, angry, petulant, and now ACCUSATORY of something you state "I am going to do!"

You ARE wrong about FCC regulations. I am very much bound by FCC regulations, both by radio but also for certain wireline communications. You really need the entire Title 47 C.F.R. to confirm that (for your own edification).

>I'm quite happy to observe the regulations governing amateur radio in Marvelous! Should we chip in get you a nice little gold star for your report card?

I don't recall that anyone was accusing you of anything other than a bad temper, irrational behavior, or trying to imitate some Waffen SS offizier in here. FCC doesn't regulate behavior.

>You aren't entering amateur radio.

I'm "not"?!?" What do you KNOW what I'm doing? Are you
Claire Voyant in some ham radio column or something?

Now, now, you are adding a mean streak to your bad temper, petulance, and irrationality. Try playing "nice." :-)

>I've not ordered you to obtain an amateur >radio license or not to obtain an amateur radio license.

Tsk, tsk, tsk. You certainly gone on and on and on and on about my "not having one!" Why is that?

>I've not told >you to comment to the FCC or not to comment to the FCC.

You've certainly gone on and on and on and on and on about attempting ridicule of what I've written to the FCC. :-)

>If you don't like my "smug arrogance", change your own tactics.

Now, now, you ARE telling me what to do! Hypocrite.

How wonderfully magnanimous of Heil! :-)

>You've been braying in this newsgroup for better than a decade.

"Braying?" Neighhhh, Wilbur. :-)

>You have not made an attempt to obtain an amateur radio license.

Now, now, there you go again with your bad temper and terrible insistence that ONLY amateur licensees can talk about amateur radio!

>I had nothing to do with your failure to do so.

"Failure?!?" Tsk, tsk, never tried.

I've had a Commercial radio operator license since 1956.
Why do you insist I have an AMATEUR license?

Tsk, Heil is exhibiting irrationality again.

>You're a victim of inertia.

This USMC Imposter has had YEARS to produce SOME evidence by document or even snapshot to prove his USMC service and has FAILED to produce a single item, not even the name of another servicemember for personal verification.

When pinned by challenges, the USMC Imposter bluffs and says
"Call the VA." An obvious BLUFF since the Veterans Administration does NOT have old service records...those are at the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) in St. Louis. NARA will not, repeat NOT, give out information to just anyone. A requestor must be the one on record or family of same (the family line is limited) or a recognized investigative agency or known branch of government.

A simple digital scan of a DD-214 would suffice. Two others have supplied that. I have mine ready to send but I've also got a 20-page photo essay at http://sujan.hallikainen.org that shows what I did for three years in my Army service. I once sent a scan of my first First 'Phone to two coders in here but they REFUSED to look at it. One of them was the USMC Imposter who, unable to control himself, made a libelous and hateful home page on AOL about me (AOL removed it rather quickly). The USMC Imposter was then clearly out of control of himself but I was still optimistic he would snap out of it. He did not.

>> YOU have LIED and EMBELLISHED certain details about YOUR service, >>but that's OK...At least you really did put on a uniform...

Tsk, tsk, tsk...the USMC Imposter is STILL out of control.
I've "embellished" nothing about my military service, do not have to. I've got enough documentary and personal evidence to prove that in a REAL court of law. [a real court of law can obtain full NARA records if they need it]
Not only that, Gene Rosenbaum, N2JTV, was IN my Signal Company doing the same things as I was doing in the same period; Gene is retired after a career with the FAA, lives on Long Island.

>> (Yes...feel free to dive into your "seven hostile actions" rant >>here, Lennie...None of which serves to change the facts...)
>still no proof from you

Years and years of NOTHING from the USMC Imposter, only bluffs and brags in messages, NO third-party proof.

Next week I'll be at the three-story Media City Mall in Burbank, CA. There's an Army recruiting station there.
I may stop in and mention that there might be a USMC Imposter floating around, give them this Imposter's FCC mailing address (quite public, from QRZ) and let them do with it as they see fit. Military members are NOT happy with Imposters. That includes personnel from other military branches; we've all worn the same "U.S." collar insignia. Maybe the FBI would like to know, too?

This is NOT a "threat." It would be doing the USA a real service. I don't have to do a thing beyond giving the military personnel there some public information.

That's to get out of answering direct charges of your failure to do a REAL service to your country.

You have never served the military. You have never volunteered for the military. You have never served your government(s).
All you seem to blabber about in here is OTHERS. If it is a no-code-test advocate who served you try to denigrate them.

Answer WHAT? I served (ASN RA 16 408 336) 1952-1960. Brian served in the USAF at a later time and for longer. YOU could have served in one of your governments yet you did not. You've never been a policeman or a forest ranger or even dog catcher.

Yet you try to DEMEAN any no-code-test advocates' military service just because you favor morse code testing in the AMATEUR radio service. QED...like deja vu.

Stolen Valor Part Four: Phony veteran catching kit
By Eric

In honor of Memorial Day and in light of Jesse MacBeth's fraud, I'd like to continue my Stolen Valor series with a special entry on how to identify and pursue fraudulent veterans.

I'll begin with a list of 8 ways to spot a phony veteran - according to Thomas A. Cottone, Jr., an FBI special agent that specializes in medal fraud cases and fraudulent veterans, and as written by Marine Corps Times writer Laura Bailey. Lastly, I'd like to talk about a couple of Agent Cottone, Jr.'s tips and a few of my own:

1. Sketchy records. When asked to verify details of their military record, phonies often say they didn't go through the normal military channels, said Mike Sandborn, an FBI special agent and former Marine captain who works medals fraud cases. Sandborn said phonies will often say they were in high demand by the military and weren't required to go through the normal training.

2. Appearance matters. Impostors put on pretty lousy impersonations. They're often out of shape or have a "slovenly appearance in uniform," Sandborn said. If they look like "50 pounds of pork shoved into a 10-pound sack," Sandborn said, they're probably an impostor.

3. Top secret? Probably not. A phony often will say details of his career exploits are classified. But even with awards for classified actions, ceremonies are never top secret. Veterans claiming to have received an award should be able to produce an order granting it no matter how secretive the action.

And more...

How to Spot a Phony Veteran Or False POW

Editor's Note: If your organization or company is confronted by a self-proclaimed veteran or former POW, there is a simple process by which you can verify the information. In addition, several organizations listed here can provide useful support for validating the military service, decorations and wartime experiences of any self-proclaimed veteran.

Verifying a Veteran's Records

(1) Require a full set of identification papers and military documents before you agree to employ or deal work with the veteran.

Many would-be veterans simply fabricate their biographies from thin air, but others have been known to forge documents or even to commit "identity theft" of actual POWs or veterans. So it is necessary not only to check out his claims but to compare his documentation against that of the military archives.

You should begin by informing the veteran that because all too many phony veterans have deceived the public in recent years about their wartime experiences, it is a sad necessity that you cannot accept his claim at face value, and have to confirm the veteran's identity and his official records before you may proceed. The first step is to obtain a transcript of his military service from the National Military Records Center in St. Louis, Mo. - the branch of the National Archives that handles all military personnel records.

You should insist on the following from the claimant himself: A copy of birth certificate or passport, driver's license, Form DD-214 (summary of military service at discharge), and a copy of the General Order for each award or medal. You should obtain his Social Security number.

And more....

Jimmy reached so far in that faulty logic that his hand is in the next universe. :-)

By Miccolis "Wispy" Logic (not quite the "Fuzzy" kind), anyone who rides on public transport and pays income tax means the government is "subsidizing" public transport! :-)

This is getting hilarious. Too bad it is so sick...

Jimmy never served in the military.
Jimmy never volunteered to serve in the military.
Jimmy never served in any of his governments.
Jimmy "knows" all about the military and government!

Blech...

Post numerous blank posts, or posts containing only a message id.
Post numerous copy&paste web articles from crackerpot websites.
Never forget to call kookologists "k00ks."
If there are several, call them "sockpuppets" too
When all else fails, accuse various and sundry kookologists of e-mailing viruses to you. This is a sure-fire method of garnering sympathy and ensuring that the General Public will always see things your way. An especially effective sub-strategy here is to accuse them of infecting you with the 'Sasser' worm via e-mail.

Quote notorious scientists or writers - it makes it look as if they approve the drivel you are writing!
(9-Jul-05) Anytime your computer is infected with a virus, bogged down by spyware, attacked over your internet connection, or otherwise suffers from preventable problems, government agencies are responsible and are trying to silence you and are monitoring your computer files.
Ignore all traffic signs and feel free to trespass, you don't have to obey any rules.
Scare your enemies with lawsuits, police escorts and whines.
Always back up your empty (albeit noisy) threats with phony LARTs, false police reports, and harassing letters to the FBI and other gubbermint agencies.
Be vigilant in your redundancy. The more you repeat yourself, the more likely others will believe you!
If you can't find anyone as crazy as yourself to support you in the flamewars you start with the normal population, create sock puppets and use anonymous remailers that shamelessly hang on every word you write.
(17-Mar-05) When dealing with law enforcement, remember that it is they who have the problem, not you. Be sure to inform them of this at every available opportunity, as they will surely appreciate your constructive criticism. Be sure to make them aware that YOU KNOW YOUR RIGHTS! The more your fake personalities adulate you, the more respect you'll get!
When confronted with a reality that you don't like: Announce loudly that you are departing, never to return as long as there's an Internet. Come back in three or four days and claim you were drunk, hacked, abducted by alience, or forged. Alternately you can just not even mention your prior departure, and if anyone asks you about it, either ignore them or respond with something along the lines of "YOUR NOT THE BOSS OF ME! PLONK!" People really know you mean business then.
Always remain clueproof.

They've nuked hundreds of accounts in the name of free speech and yours will be next.
The k00k will, without any trace of irony, lie, manipulate, impersonate, censor, and declare themselves powerful in ways ranging from the ability to have an account shut down to being God Herself, in order to convince people that they are not liars, manipulators, censors, or insane.
Abuse women while telling how many hundreds you've loved. Nevermind that you're one ugly motherfucker and that there were 30,000 femininas that thought you were a scumbag with bad teeth.
Remember that your ko0ky klaims are 'facts', and that 'facts' do not require proof.
Do not neglect to poast your responses to forums that the originator doesn't read. This will make the people in that forum very impressed with how you tear him to shreds without him being able to respond. They like it even better if you are off-topic for that forum.

(04-Aug-2005) When spanked mercilessly for days on end, proving with each poast just what an illiterate and ignorant fool you are, ALWAYS claim ownership of [person(s),froup(s)]. This works on so many levels. It inspires dread in your opponents that they will no longer be able to poast in their home froup and that they will eventually have to pay rent, to name just two.

Any problems with your poasts are the fault of the konspirators, who are trying to stop you from preventing the extinction of humanity.
Konspiracies that are able to subvert whole governments are always unable to silence konspiracy ko0ks.

Everyone is Tim Hill, or David Green, or...
There is a fine line between trolling and kookery. Find that line and cross it repeatedly. When you are killfiled and/or LARTed for net.abuse as a result, claim victory. If you lose multiple accounts, this merely proves that you are indeed a world-class troll, with a black-belt in manipulation.
If you respond to every post someone else makes, they're obsessed. If they respond to less than 1% of your posts, they're even more obsessed.
Publishing people's real names, addresses, and phone numbers when there's no other way for you to come out of a flamewar with any dignity is cool, and proves that you are a master of secret internet information stores, and absolutely not to be fucked with.
Everyone is out to get you. You can put a stop to this by telling everyone that they're out to get you at every available opportunity.
You are the only sane one.
Those that give you a hard time about morally bankrupt things you yourself admit to are just persecutioners of the new inquisition.
Yelling in all caps and cursing at your detractors is debate. Your detractors laughing at you with sarcastic remarks is obvious anger and jealousy.

Are they part of a bus line?

I don't think so.

Nope.

How do you define "public transportation"?

Does it mean transportation services that are available to the general public?

Or does it mean transportation services that are owned by the general public?

They didn't draft people into the Guard at all.

What happened was this:

Back then, (Vietnam War era) it was a very safe bet that most Guard units would never be sent out of the USA. Guard units had no problem getting full enlistment - in fact, it was difficult for the average person to get in.

Both Al Gore and George W. Bush had the opportunity to serve in Guard units because of their family connections (Gore is the son of a senator, and you know Bush's dad).

Were his remarks about the military in general, or about specific things he witnessed?

If he saw things that weren't right, wasn't it his duty to testify about them?

You're being very unspecific.

You claimed that FDR "had a priori knowledge of Pearl Harbor and did nothing."

Where are the references to back up your claim?

Did FDR know that Pearl Harbor was going to be attacked on Dec. 7 or just that Japan was likely to attack somewhere, at some time after Nov. 29?

Did FDR get whatever information he got before the attack? If so, was how long before? What other information did they have?

btw, in the summer of 2001, George W. Bush had information indicating that OBL was planning an attack in the USA. He did nothing, and more Americans died than at Pearl Harbor.

Of course it's easy to look at selected data after the fact and say that FDR or GWB should have known what was coming.

The Japanese weren't doing suicide attacks in 1941. They didn't have to.

Is that FDR's fault? Do you think he should have known, in the 1930s, what the conditions would be 70 years later?

Not really. His solution would re-create all the problems that made Social Security necessary in the first place.

They wanted it 13 years early. Hoover said no. FDR said no. Where's the disdain?

they lost it all, and what was done to prevent that happening again.

IOW, you were flat wrong about the Bonus Marchers and FDR, Brian. It wasn't the "liberal" FDR that showed disdain for them in the summer of 1932.

What is this "liberal disdain" of which you speak? You used the phrase "usual liberal disdain" before, yet can't seem to back it up.

I don't "disdain" the military or military personnel. Nor do I agree with everything you write, or everything Len writes, just because of military service.

Papa Bush and Shrub also "looked the other way".

But that's not the point.

We were specifically told just before the invasion of Iraq, by the Current Occupant, that SH had WMDs in his possession and that he was ready to use them and/or give them to terror organizations. This was the entire justification for the invasion. No WMDs have ever been found, nor evidence that they existed and were moved. No connection to terror, either.

We were also told that the Iraqis would welcome the liberation of their country. While some of them welcomed the fall of SH, a good number of them soon set about fighting their liberators - and each other.

Now it's three years later, and a recent report says the war has made the terror situation worse. That report is from US intelligence agencies.

How effective was that?

Nobody with any sense says SH was a good guy. The question is whether it was a good idea to invade Iraq in 2003, and how it was done.

SH is the same guy Rumsfeld was shaking hands with in the 1980s, right?

> That alone should have prompted Clinton to act, but he didn't.

And now the USA is bogged down in a country where the liberated people are as busy fighting each other as they are fighting their liberators. They don't seem very thankful to have been liberated, either. Where the USA is made to look bad (Abu Gharib, etc.) in the world's eyes. And where a dictatorship has become an incubator for terror and a rallying cry for those who oppose the USA.

Meanwhile, other countries are emboldened to push the limits because they know the USA doesn't have infinite resources.

btw - before the 2003 invasion, the generals in the Pentagon wanted to use a much larger force. Rumsfeld did not listen, because it would take longer to build up such a force, and went with a force much smaller than was used in Desert Storm. Was that disdain for the military?

Back in 2004, a local church put up several hundred small white crosses on their lawn - one for each serviceperson killed in the Iraq war. No signs, no commentary, no protesting people, just the crosses. Couple of Stars of David and even some cresecnt moons, too. They were up for several weeks. Was that "the usual liberal disdain for the military"?

The church can't do it again - their lawn isn't big enough.

Here's some background on "LLoyd"

LLoyd is a racist troll who was arrested for screwing cows and pumpkins.
Date: July 4, 1998 caught masturbating in the back row of the movie theater.
Lloyd claimed he saw " a bug on my pee pee and I was trying to shake it off".

Date: September 12, 1998 caught showing two young boys his " willie ".
the parents moved and didn't prosecute.

Date: December 21, 1998 caught jerking off behind the local porno magazine
store to pictures of naked men.

Date: March 8, 1999 caught putting " secret sauce ' on pizza just before delivering it.

July 4, 1999 (you have something to tell us about july 4th Lloyd?) caught putting his penis in the cotton candy machine at local fair, then offering
some special cotton candy to young boys.

October 14, 1999 caught cornholing a friend in back seat of car at local park
(a pickle park?) claimed he got stuck while playing leapfrog.

Date: January 12, 2000 Caught at local traffic light with no pants on and jerking off.

Date: August 16, 2000 Caught at pickle park at rest stop soliciting oral sex.

Date: October 20, 2000 caught screwing a pumpkin outside of Athens, claimed
he was making pumpkin pie filling for a friend.

Date: January, 2001 caught cornholing a cow, contracted the mad cow disease,
as evidenced by his bizarre behavious lately. Acting tough etc.

>One letter?
>No "interference"?

Read everything closely. There were three letters sent.

The letters to both Wiseman and Tunder were a preemptive "warning" that did not allege any activities. That hardly qualifies as a warning in the context of someone having actually done something.

The letter with the warning in it ALLEGED interference, and warned of consequences.

The retest letter made no reference to interference; in fact gave no reason for requiring the retest. Such a request is part of the Volunteer Examining program. It could have been made for any number of reasons that may have had nothing to do with any of the addressee's actions. An investigation into the VE group that gave the test, would be a good example.

Only one letter was a warning referring to interference.

You don't hold a General license. You can't even post under your callsign, since you don't have one.

Read everything closely. There were three letters sent.

The letters to both Wiseman and Tunder were a preemptive "warning"
that did not allege any activities. That hardly qualifies as a warning

in the context of someone having actually done something.

The letter with the warning in it ALLEGED interference, and warned of consequences.

The retest letter made no reference to interference; in fact gave no reason for requiring the retest. Such a request is part of the Volunteer Examining program. It could have been made for any number of reasons that may have had nothing to do with any of the addressee's actions. An investigation into the VE group that gave the test, would be a good example.

Only one letter was a warning referring to interference.

So, yes; if you are going to tell it, tell it straight.

So, Len, your personal morality makes a distinction between how you treat people in professional vs. personal life. In your personal, non-professional life, you feel that it is acceptable and defensible:

7. to avoid, refuse, and withhold honest criticism of technical work, to deny and ignore errors, and to credit improperly the contributions of others;

8. to treat unfairly all persons particularly of such factors as race, religion, gender, disability, age, or national origin;

9. to seek injuring others, their property, reputation, or employment by false or malicious action;

"Taod", "Chgris", "illgeal", "brooiadcast"? Oh my! You're falling apart, UnWiseman.

I think it is nice that someone with a good deal of expertise in dealing with FCC enforcement issues is lending "Taod" a hand.

My stance isn't illogical at all. It can't begin to compare to a fellow who spends ten years of his life obsessed with something in which he has no involvement. You're amateur radio fetish is beyond compare.

Great. I'll grant that those administering actual driving tests are quite likely to need a driving license. Those who work inside, the clerks who transfer titles, issue licenses and such, don't need such a license.

And? If any of those FCC employees or commissioners want to take part in amateur radio, they need to obtain a license in the same manner as anyone else who becomes licenses. Really.

That's right. You have the hang of it. I've not been shut down nor fined. You, on the other hand, aren't involved in amateur radio.

I used the term which was stated by Leonard H. Anderson.

I haven't stated that I'm going to obtain an Extra right out of the box, then that I have no intention of obtaining an amateur radio license and then that I am getting into amateur radio and then that I have no desire to obtain an amateur radio license. Now that is vacillation!

The point is, Leonard, that you aren't going to run afoul of Part 97

Leonard.

It is because you'd have radio amateurs believe that an inexperienced fellow who has never obtained an amateur radio license knows what is best for amateur radio. Tsk, tsk, poor baby, toad-in-a-hole and Bob's your uncle.

No temper was exhibited. I made a statement of fact. You've talked about amateur radio. That doesn't make you a radio amateur.

You've expressed a decades-long interest in amateur radio. You told us that you were going to get an "Extra right out of the box". You have posted to this newsgroup for better than ten years. You have failed to obtain an amateur radio license. It doesn't matter if you tried once or several times and failed or if you failed by never trying.

> I've had a Commercial radio operator license since 1956.

You're in the wrong newsgroup. This one concerns amateur radio and Mark Morgan's fetishes.

> Why do you insist I have an AMATEUR license?

I've never insisted that you have to have one. In fact, I rather hope that you never get one.

I didn't do so. Your statement is absurd.

I don't know what it is like where you live, Brian. Disproving the above would be easy hearabouts. All one needs do is observe the American Legion Color Guard on a holiday, a high school football game or at a funeral.

I cannot fit into any uniform that I wore over thirty-four years ago. My dad couldn't fit into any of his WWII Navy uniforms. Apparently, appearance doesn't matter much at all.

As an aside, I encourage you to contact the "Stolen Valor" guys and for Len to drop by the recruiting office in regard to Steve's service. If it turns out that you've falsely accused him, I'll expect to see numerous mea culpas for weeks and weeks afterward, since you two would look like prize boobs.

Wow... someone probably just reefed on a video cable that was still screwed into the connector and ripped it off?

I would wager that you'll find it will work just fine if you can successfully re-attach a connector (and repair any damaged traces!)

"Personal morality..."

HAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHA!!!!!!!!!!!!

Tsk, the Torquemadas are in a conclave now? :-) :-)

Too funny, really...but tragic in the obvious state of mind of a future newsgroup moderator...and a possible course of action of future newsgroup "moderation."

Here's a plain and simple fact: Heil, unable to control hisself, searched and searched for a weapon of anti-morse destruction and seized the IEEE Code of Conduct...saying he "addressed it." Not fully, so I merely listed the IEEE mailing address for his convenience.

David Heil is perfectly free to communicate with the IEEE and bring his CHARGES OF MISCONDUCT against me to the attention of the Membership Committee of the IEEE, the Ethics Committee, whatever IEEE official, other IEEE members he wants to vent to. So are you. Go ahead.

As I've said, as the IEEE says, it is a Professional Association. It has no direct bearing on AMATEUR RADIO other than some of its thousands of members no doubt do professional work on designing, manufacturing, and selling of amateur radio equipment. The IEEE makes available a forwarding alias for e-mail to members and I use that free service, hence the "signature" I use. Some have great difficulty with that "signature," demanding I either drop it or get an amateur radio license and use that (as "official?"). Now that "signature" (or "ID" or just an e-mail address) has become a Cause Celebre' of yourself and someone who has an obsession of villifying his newsgroup enemies?

Here's another plain and simple fact: There are dozens of daily postings by anonymous individuals in THIS newsgroup spewing hateful filth about others. A simple search of Google archives will turn up "responsible" (Ha!) "names" such as "Not Cocksucker Lloyd" and "Billy Shittydrawers" yet THEY are NOT made a target of this Inquisition into the "Morality" of their postings. Why IS that? They do not have any identifiable connection with amateur radio, but you seem to avoid them in favor of direct (snide) "attacks" on certain others such as myself. That is hypocrisy in action, demonstratable in things like the insinuation below:

>In your personal,
>non-professional life, you feel that it is acceptable
>and defensible:

What I do in my "personal, non-professional life" is none of your concern. Neither you nor David Heil can control that, modify it, or make judgements on it leading to cessation of my rights to free speech as a citizen of the USA and as a military veteran of the USA. Yet, you actively seek to CONTROL it. Why? Because you are PERSONALLY upset by my words? You feel you are such a supreme ruler that you can CONTROL opposing opinions or wish to delete all postings which are not to some arbitrary standard of protocol demanding obediance to some self-righteous opinions held by a ruling clique?

If you wish to delve into my "personal, non-professional" life, get together an Investigative Team. You can use those that Hewlett-Packard did (their business may have slowed since HP is under investigation and no doubt have some free time). Feel free to start with my Pastor, Ralph Midtlyng, at All-Saints Community Church three blocks away from my house. It is principally a Lutheran church but does not bar others about their "personal, non-professional life." [recall that Martin Luther was no shrinking violet on matters theological?]

Interrogate my immediate neighbors about my "personal, non-professional life." The Topalians are right across the street, Hurleys and Brunos on either side, the Gonzalez family up on the corner. Consult old issues of Ham Radio for my address; it hasn't changed since May of '63. Try my city councilmember's office (Wendy Gruel, real name). Or possibly the Los Angeles Police Department, Foothill Division. Maybe you can extract juicy little tidbits of "scandal" to use in here to actively engage in vituperative attacks who don't fit your mold? Since you won't find any, feel free to MANUFACTURE some. Others do it, therefore it is okay?

Yes, I suppose there is some great (grate?) significance about "personal, non-professional life" that the outraged wish to use as weapons of anti-morse destruction (see Heil's vituperation in here) against me. Try my Sex Life (heterosexual). My wife is also my high school sweetheart. I would suggest you NOT consult my wife on "personal, non-professional life" for your own emotional safety. Her name? Hundreds of our school classmates know it. Sorry, you'll have to find that out yourself but your Investigative Team will know the correct government agency to find that out...and many more items of "personal, non-professional life" data.

I've tried to help you out here on "personal, non-professional life" items as a courtesy to your apparent Inquisition of a single individual. You really can't ask more than that, can you? :-)

Why do you feel that AMATEUR radio activity is to be taken the SAME as Professional Activity? Why do you side with the allegations of "misconduct" in "personal, non-professional life" by someone who is a known personal attacker of those he does not like. Do you wish to add more spotlights to some imagined "dispute" between a Professional Code of ETHICS, not "morality?" Make this into a "federal case?" Why? Personality conflict? My failure to "pop to" and pay some kind of "respect" you feel "owed" to you? I am NOT OBLIGATED to do that, except in a few individual's fantasies or imaginations.

I am NOT OBLIGATED to "pay respect" to some olde-tyme radio amateur just because they have some federal license in amateur radio. I was IN radio communications on HF full-time before some of these self-styled "rulers" of the amateur waves were born, using techniques that persist in amateur radio HF communications today. With the exception of manual radiotelegraphy which wasn't used a half century ago but persists in the mythical "standards" of US amateur radio today.

I am NOT OBLIGATED to ANYONE who insists on calling every statement I make "wrong" or others with some smug, arrogant attitudes that they are "superior." My opinions are my opinions, those of a free and independent US citizen who has taken an Oath to preserve the Constitution of the United States.

I am NOT OBLIGATED to ANYONE who cannot personally stand opposition to self-righteous opinions of theirs. I am NOT OBLIGATED to "stand on an outside" on any subject that some alleged "insiders" say I do.

I am NOT OBLIGATED to any would-be moderator who wants to both moderate and to engage in one-sided behavior in the newsgroup.

ByteBrothers famous phrase invoked.

Shudder! So...that is what the mutant branch of US amateur radio has become? "Amateur Radiotelegraph Scatological Society?"

I'm going to have to cut back on all this posting. Some
"investigators" are about to show up from the Federal Bureau of Newsgroup Investigation and Moderation. They want to "know" what my "personal, non-professional life"
is like. Since I'm NOT OBLIGATED to tell them, they will have a tantrum and cause me to "disappear." :-)

Public transportation companies that use roads, bridges, and tunnels

Dave's not angry. Neither am I.

You sure seem to be angry, Len.

As for "antagaonistic", we're just opposing what we think is a bad idea. You seem to have a very difficult time with disagreement - your behavior rapidly deteriorates when someone here disagrees with you.

> No harm will come to you if the test is eliminated.

Can you guarantee that, Len? I think not.

The subject of this thread is "Gerritsen Sentenced". Gerritsen is a former radio amateur who caused harm to many amateurs and others in his area - jamming their transmissions, tying up repeaters, deliberately interfering, etc. It took years to get him convicted and sentenced.

Worst of all, he did a lot of damage to the public image of amateur radio.

Obviously letting someone like Gerritsen get a license in the first place was a mistake. The testing process did not insure that he would follow the rules. He obviously did not care about proper behavior on the air.

One concern many of us have about continued reductions in the license test requirements - both code and written - is that more folks like Gerritsen will get licenses and behave as he did.

If changes in the license requirements let in more like him, those of us who are currently licensed will be harmed. Those like you who are not involved in amateur radio will not be affected.

btw, Len, Gerritsen lived over in Bell, CA, about a half-hour from your house. He's pretty close to your age, too.

It's interesting that you proposed an age requirement that would ban anyone under the age of 14 from getting an amateur radio license, without any examples of problems caused by the licensing of young people.

Yet the worst amateur radio offender in recent history is pretty close to your age.

> >You aren't a radio amateur.
> True, but what DOES that have to do with talking about
> US amateur radio regulations?

You can "talk" all you want, Len. Nobody is saying you shouldn't.

The problem is that you do not deal with disagreement well. You don't want to discuss, you want to lecture and not have your lectures examined, criticized, or refuted.

> FCC doesn't regulate behavior.

Actually, they do.

> >You aren't entering amateur radio.
> I'm "not"?!?" What do you KNOW what I'm doing? Are you
> Claire Voyant in some ham radio column or something?

Back on January 19, 2000, you wrote here that you were "going for Extra right out of the box". Hasn't happened - in fact, you have not obtained an amateur radio license of any kind. Almost 8 years and you haven't taken the first step.

The Technician class license has not required a code test since February 14, 1991. Almost 16 years and you haven't taken the first step.

It's a pretty good bet that you're not going to get an amateur radio license, Len.

You are mistaken, Len. No one is insisting that only licensees can talk about it.

Shudder! So...that is what the mutant branch of US amateur radio has become? "Amateur Radiotelegraph Scatological Society?"

I'm going to have to cut back on all this posting. Some
"investigators" are about to show up from the Federal Bureau of Newsgroup Investigation and Moderation. They want to "know" what my "personal, non-professional life"
is like. Since I'm NOT OBLIGATED to tell them, they will have a tantrum and cause me to "disappear." :-)

Beep, beep,

Sorry you feel that way. These will Help:

Step 1: No more automatic renewals. Individuals must retest and pass all elements required for their license class.

Step 2: The passing score for written exams needs to be raised to 85%.

Step 3: Code elements should be 13 wpm for General, and 20 wpm for Extra.

Step 4: Make the no-code license one year non-renewable.

I and other readers of rec.radio.amateur.antenna would really appreciate it if you'd leave that newsgroup off the lengthy list you post this sort of thing to.

If you're not willing to do that, perhaps some of the people who feel compelled to respond would be thoughtful enough to remove that newsgroup from the list receiving the responses.

I thought it was kind of funny too--the idea that you'd demonstrate some personal morality.

I said I addressed the IEEE Code of Ethics? I could have sworn that I said you had not addressed it despite your claim of doing so. I've controlled myself very well, Len. The sheer length of your post and the angst contained therein demonstrates that you aren't in control of yourself.

I didn't need to "seize the IEEE Code of Conduct". You post with an IEEE address. You told us of your membership in the IEEE. The IEEE has a Code of Ethics. You obviously do not behave in a manner outlined by that code. Here I thought you were only against the Morse Code.

I don't need a go ahead from you.

Then why, pray tell, do you start posting with an IEEE address and braying about your membership here? This isn't a PROFESSIONAL newsgroup. You're quite right that the IEEE has no more direct bearing on amateur radio than your repeated tales of how long you've held a COMMERCIAL license.

Someone who has an obsession with villifying his newsgroup enemies? That sounds like you! Are you demanding that you drop your IEEE sig?

The hell they aren't. You aren't paying attention. The individual posting as "Not Cocksucker Lloyd", "Billy Shittydrawers", "Markie Rapes (whatever" and many others is, as I've frequently pointed out, noted sociopath, scofflaw, mental case Roger L. Wiseman AB8MQ, formerly KC8JBO of Glen Dale, West Virginia--right here in my county. Local law enforcement personnel are quite aware of him and have had encounters with him.

Roger has an identifiable connection with amateur radio. He also crossposts many of his responses, drawing in others. Pay attention. His posts do not excuse your posts. After all, he is mentally ill. Are you claiming a mental exemption?

The behavior you exhibit here is certainly part of your "personal, non-professional life", Leonard.

At ease, Sarge.

1. This isn't a military newsgroup.

2. I am free to make judgments (not judegements) on anything you write here.

3. Nobody has done anything to abrogate your rights to free speech. You simply don't understand that while you are free to speak or write, no one must listen. No one must refrain from heckling. No one must agree with you. No one must show deference to you.

The balance of your rant snipped.

I suppose you use that kind of language on the radio too. There is is a reaon the FCC has rules against it and good adult conduct dictates you act a certain way in public. You sound like a simpleton as all you can Well, this doesn't seem very relevant for folks here in rec.radio.amateur.boatanchors. We think the requirements should include being able to bench press a Collins R-390 and being tested on changing coupling capacitors with the B+ live.

Other folks may consider other tests, for example testing someone for the ability to hold down the key for ten minutes straight while shouting "This is my channel, you don't own this frequency" over and over again. This is a skill that is becoming increasingly popular.

Revenge of the Pharisees - How Messianic Judaism is Subverting Christianity and Preparing the Way for the Fatal Seduction: Texe Marrs explores the boom of "Messianic Judaism." Entire congregations of Baptist, Pentecostal, even Presbyterian and other denominational churches are "going Jew!" Their pastors demand to be called "Rabbi." Their people are wearing Jewish garments and are into Yiddish songs and dancing in a circle. Meanwhile, some are working on a "Christian Talmud," a book of laws and traditions for all Christians to obey. Of course, the "Rabbis" of these churches are demanding their followers honor all the old Jewish holy days, including Purim, Rosh Hoshanah, Yom Kippur, etc. In some instances, Jesus is being changed into a mere "Rabbi" himself, or one of many ancient Jewish "sages." Meanwhile, Jews who convert to Christianity are not Christians, they are said to be "completed Jews." Many in this fast growth, pro-Zionist movement predict it will eventually sweep away all vestiges of the "old, obsolete Christianity," replacing it with a new form of "Judaic New Age holiness." Hear what Texe Marrs has to say in this mind-warping, exclusive report about the movement destined to change our religious world in a dramatic and calamitous fashion in coming months.....

Just got the following in my email

Hello Fellow Ham !!

My name is Katie, W1KRB and I am a new ham! I am also one of the newest staff members at ARRL--the national association for Amateur Radio.

When I came to ARRL 6 months ago as the new Membership Manager, I honestly didn't know anything about Amateur Radio. I came here with a background in non-profit and government management. But once I started, I discovered an amazing radio service and an association filled with great people: members, volunteers and staff. ARRL's efforts in advocacy, education, and public service benefit all hams. ARRL is the lifeblood of Amateur Radio, and I cannot imagine being a ham today without being a member of ARRL.

It seems that your membership with ARRL has lapsed some time ago. Let me personally invite you back today! And, if you join now, I will send your choice of one the following free gifts:

CHOICE #1 - Getting Started with Ham Radio, $19.95 value (online Code MRE)
If you have your license, but perhaps you haven't been active in some time and are thinking about getting back into it, then you'll enjoy Getting Started with Ham Radio. This new book covers everything from getting your first rig, to the digital universe, using voice on the HF bands, and the World above 50 MHz. It's also a great reference for all hams!

CHOICE #2 - The ARRL Antenna Book, $44.95 value (online Code MRE)
Ok, so perhaps you have your sights set on improving your station. Start at the top...with your antenna! I have yet to meet a ham that wouldn't be thrilled to have The ARRL Antenna Book with fully searchable CD-ROM in their library. It's THE ultimate reference tool for antennas, transmission lines and propagation.

CHOICE #3 - The ARRL Emergency Communication Handbook, $19.95 value (online Code MRE)
Are you a ham with a passion for public service? Since the Gulf Coast hurricanes in 2005, countless individuals have recognized the value of having an Amateur Radio operator's license and have embarked on the path of emergency communications. The ARRL Emergency Communication Handbook is intended for all hams that volunteer their skills in public service applications.

Joining ARRL is easy! Follow this link to the online membership form: www.arrl.org/join. Be sure to enter the Code "MRE" when you are completing the application form. After you submit the application, you'll be prompted for your Free Book choice.

Won't you join me and the other 150,000 hams around the world that proudly call themselves ARRL Members...TODAY!

I look forward to welcoming you back!

73,
Katie

Katie Breen, W1KRB
Membership Manager

PS. If you choose not to re-join the ARRL, would you be so kind as to take a moment and share your story with me? Please don't hold back - share!!! Write to me directly at w1krb@arrl.org

And, if you decide to re-join - won't you share that with me as well? I'd like to know what brought you back!

HURRY! The free book offer expires October 15, 2006.
JOIN ARRL
To join ARRL, please use the links in this message to visit ARRL's secure online membership form. Or, call our Membership Team toll-free in the US 1-888-277-5289, Monday through Friday from 8 AM to 8 PM Eastern time [Outside US telephone (860) 594-0355].

ABOUT THIS E-MAIL

I received your email and Hope not to hear from the ARRL again

It shows indeed the odd state of affair that a new am was placed in charge of the membership office and yet that New Ham (you) is not a tech class op.

I was member of the ARRL some years but frankly found little benefit in maintaining association in an Organization that fails to consider the needs of the member of the largest class in the ARS. I had considered possible when Carl Stevenson was standing for election to the BoD thinking perhaps the ARRL was prepared for some debate the ending of the affair convinced me to reconsider rejoining an organization that paid lip service to "work from within" and yet choose to prevent promemate member s of NCI from even standing for election from reading QST over the year(I nearly complete set on cd going back quite some time and find the ARRL to opposed to all changes till they happen then of course they supported the change all along

In short while in generous moments, I am prepared to consider that ARRL may be trying to advance what it believes to be the best interests of the ARS , I am also convinces that these efforts are damaging to the ARS and most esp its future

I received your email and Hope not to hear from the ARRL again

It shows indeed the odd state of affair that a new am was placed in charge of the membership office and yet that New Ham (you) is not a tech class op.

I was member of the ARRL some years but frankly found little benefit in maintaining association in an Organization that fails to consider the needs of the member of the largest class in the ARS. I had considered possible when Carl Stevenson was standing for election to the BoD thinking perhaps the ARRL was prepared for some debate the ending of the affair convinced me to reconsider rejoining an organization that paid lip service to "work from within" and yet choose to prevent promemate member s of NCI from even standing for election from reading QST over the year(I nearly complete set on cd going back quite some time and find the ARRL to opposed to all changes till they happen then of course they supported the change all along

In short while in generous moments, I am prepared to consider that ARRL may be trying to advance what it believes to be the best interests of the ARS , I am also convinces that these efforts are damaging to the ARS and most esp its future

But if it's Woger's nameless frogger (and I do vaguely recall hearing something about Wiseman's incarceration, back in 2000 or 2001, now), who shall be henceforth known as "Woger", "Wabbit", or "Wiseman", by Imperial decree from Teh Court of MEOW, then Formosa's Rule doesn't apply. Now, back into the Galactic Killfile with you.

Hi. This is the meow-send program at usenet. I'm afraid I wasn't able to deliver any clue to the following address: Marcus_Cox2003@yahoo.com
"Marcus Cox"
This is a permanent error; I've given up. Sorry it didn't work out.

: Rhonda, never mind Steve the Lesbians poor attempt at humor.

never mind your extremely feeble attempt at laming, top-poasting fuckwit.

If you're refering to the AOL page, you are wrong in that it was "libellous". Nothing can be "libel" if the uttered statements are true. Nothing on that page was untrue. AOL removed it ONLY because you found it "personally hurtful". The content was never in debate.

If you mean the threads in this forum that I have occassionally run, well...same rules...It's not libel if the uttered statement is true. And in that case you're free to use "Google Archives" to recover any of them. Again...Nothing untrue was said.

Which is pretty much everyone except for Morkie, Toiddie and Brain.

Those three options in and of themselves ought to "say something" about the company he keeps, though.

Sure it will.

Lennie keeps uttering that silliness as if "coded licensees" would never share the same bandwidth as these folks. How idiotic.

Amateur Radio...flying...model rockets...skateboarding...

There's always ONE putz that wants to ruin things for everyone else.

Amateur Radio had one and a half...One still doesn't have a license...

I wonder how well it would have sat if Lennie had proposed an age

Bingo.

Guess Lennie's not been paying attention to all those efforts to
"can" the licenses of persons who have non-radio-related legal issues.

Personally, I think the FCC needs to be put in thier place for
that.

He can't. He can't retain the knowledge long enough to get to the front door...And they won't let him take his computer into the test exam with him.

Why should we presume he was talking about himself... OUR "Leonard forum.

Biut only those who ARE licensed and DO have some PRACTICAL EXPERIENCE are in a position to make INFORMED opinions. Lennie is NOT licensed and hs NO practical experience as a radio OPERATOR.

That, I have good reason to believe, is none other than the Outer Filth of rec.music.classical.recordings (see .sig.quote), trying, in its very lame fashion (whether it is genuinely one, two, or three people), to get back at moi for kicking them around usenet for the past six or seven weeks.
They don't seem too happy, do they?

There's no "USMC" imposter here, Lennie.

Nope.

You've been provided NUMEORUS refrences to verifyable 3rd party sources, yet can't seem to find your way areound, Lennie.

No doubt a by-product of your age.

As said before, I don't doubt you "served"...But what you HAVE been ever since is SELF-serving...With your tales of how your assignement to a unit that suffered KIA's before you were even IN the service made YOU such a hero...

Mo one gives a crap that you can drop the name of a licensed

The FACT remains that YOU try to use other people's sacrifices for YOUR benefit.

As a matter of fact, DO IT!

C O W A R D!

I'd LOVE to be able take your accusations to the bank!

And then when I am done rubbing your nose in YOUR false accusations, I'll SHOW them some of YOURS.

Then I'll drop some copes of your traffic here on the IEEE and let them see how you "represent" professional engineers!

The real 'service" would be dropping some exact quotes of some of your past RRAP posts onto some of the BBS's of your past Army units so they can see how you've tried to claim someone else's sacrifices and service as your own!

Won't happen, Dave.

Brian P Burke and Leonard H Anderson are two of the biggest buffoons to hit USENET since it's inception, but I doubt either of them is stupid enough to put themselves in a position of being liable for the very same things they accuse others of being.

Not to mention that it would give me "Bragging Rights" from now

Nope. No passion. I'd just make sure that if you, as a family member, did to me what you did to your own "father in law", you;d never be a part of the "family" again.

What apology?

I've never spoke for anyone named "Honacki", Mork.

However YOU have sent me e mails threatening to sue me as the Agent for some people, yet YOU have NOT sent me copies of the documents authorizing YOU to make those demands on thier behalf.

Do you know the penalty for making such allegations via e-mail, Morkie?

So...WHERE are the Power of attorney copies?

Come to Dayton and find out, fatboy.

Make sure your "wife" knows where the policies are and if they exclude suicide.

I stand corrected on the reversal of the rate. My bad

However YOU "mentioned" Active Duty by NOT signing your name/rate as (ret'd) after "US Navy"

Better re-check the opinions of your Feeble Five cohorts, Morkie.

Brain there says you out-###hole me every time.

But then there's no honor among idiots.

"cofessed" to waht, Morkie?

So far, all you've done is repeatedly misquote me, which has been demonstrated several times now.

Your lie is known. Why perpetuate it?

Why you CONTINUE to try and suggest I said ANYTHING other than what I said, even when you quote the WHOLE paragraph...?!?!

I D I O T ! ! ! ! ! !

> and it would still be a lie since that #### of yours I have encountered

You're an idiot, Mork.

You're "wife's" an idiot since "she" married an idiot, and your kid, if "she" is really pregnant, will be brought up by TWO idiots, pretty well assuring that it will be an idiot.

And the funny part will be in 10 years when the kid starts cruising the Internet and finds out what kind of a lying idiot "it's" dad really is.

Indeed it is, coward.

Chickenshit COWARD Saggytits Lee pathetically tries to justify his hiding behind anonymity in <3B8FFFF5.143FA...@houston-hunks.com>:

"...readers have already had uninvited people show up at their homes, have had people subscribe them to magazines and book clubs, have received hang-up calls in the middle of the night, have had poison pen letters written to their neighbors and employers, and have had poison pen email sent to their ISPs in an attempt to get their accounts canceled. That's not a "what if" scenario either: It has happened repeatedly to certain members of these news groups, yours truly included (one person has emailed repeated lies to Altopia in an attempt to learn my identity). One of our readers has even had to go to the courts and obtain an injunction against one of those nuts.

I choose not to give insane people like that any kind of edge in physically locating me, and if you think that's "cowardice", you are only demonstrating your profound ignorance of Usenet and of the kind of people who read these posts."

Then the no-balls coward ends his feminine cuntly whining with:
"And do you know what else? I AM SICK TO DEATH OF THOSE WHO REPEAT YOUR TIRED OLD, IGNORANT REFRAIN. Until you learn a few things, you ought to shut your arrogant mouth."
--
Saggytits Lee (Stagger Lee@houston-hunks.com) fails to back up his
"webcam story" when he changes the subject with lame excuses when asked what type of car Roger drives and it's color in <night.vision.woger@houston-hunks.com>:
"Those newer webcams include automatic switchover to night vision mode

when it gets dark, but the pictures are in that typical blue-green monochrome mode, and it's tough to make out fine details."

Nope, wrong again, fucknuts.

If he "saw" Roger in a "webcam" then Saggytits Davey could tell us the make and color of Roger's car. He's yet to do so.
There is no webcam and he is a liar.

Too bad Roger graduated from USF, unlike you from anywhere. He never wenrt to Devry, Columbonehead, you are a total fuck up!
How about your version of "Florida" or "experience"? Billy the community college dropout screws up again!

Billy Smith wrote:

Isn't it spelled "Florida?"

BILLY SMITH STEPS ON HIS OWN DICK THUSLY WITH THESE FUCK-UPS:

Billy "I can't read" Smith fucks up again when he claims in <gsJRg.2244$o71.124@newsread3.news.pas.earthlink.net>:
"By the way, weren't you required to retest per a letter from FCC enforcement bureau? Shall we post the record for all to see again? They don't make people retest unless you have been accused or proven to have committed rules violations."

Billy can't read the ARRL website which states:
NOTE: Issuance by the FCC of a Warning Notice indicates that the FCC
has what it believes to be reliable evidence of possible rules
infractions and not necessarily that the recipient has violated FCC rules. The FCC has the authority, pursuant to §97.519(d)(2) of the rules to readminister any examination element previously administered
by a volunteer examiner.

Billy "Dumbass who can't put together a sentence" Smith shows off those English skills, quite ironically in <VfQHf.14581$rH5.8121@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"That's interesting there idiot. I bet you really did flunk high school math and probably elementary too. Oh thats right, wasn't that when was in Floriduh. Spelled Florida but the DUH is for your Dumb Ass."

"wasn't that when was in Floriduh" - Billy makes good fuck up!

Billy "shoots" himself in his palsied club foot once again in Message-ID <Q0bJf.19641$vU2.7735@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Roger, shots himself in the foot"

Billy the "Rhodes" scholar fucks up again and even demonstrates he is an imbecile in <8uqwg.8275$v0.7632@newsread4.news.pas.earthlink.net>:
"Right you are, wannabe Rhode's Scholar!"

Billy the illiterate retard Smith screws up again, and his illiteracy is exposed. "It serves him right."
in<hauKf.1410$S25.940@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Deserves him right."

Billy "retard" Smith confesses to his generally accepted retarded status in <LwpLf.2321$F56.2317@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"I'm a general retard. bwhahaha"

Billy "spelling champ of the general retards" Smith admits his bad hygiene but is still in denial about his English skills in <QxpLf.2322$F56.1169@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net>
"Sure I can spell and smell."

"Billy" the NOtwordSmith fucks up again with this incompete sentence in <qgyNf.5576$S25.341@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"So when you got divorced boy, did your finally figure out that your more"

Billy "cumgargler" Smith managed to awaken from his drunken stupor to slobber
in <fbIOf.442$sL2.25@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Isn't that you mom weighed"

Mr."Education" Billy Smith steps on his own dick again when he talks about others' "educations" (or educatiion" as he spells it) in <w7IOf.436$sL2.167@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Uh, huh. Right LOSER. Still smoking that dope again? By the way how is your so called educatiion actually doing for you? Those online classes."

<B9IOf.439$sL2.255@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"You're whole life has been exhaled before."

Billy "illiterate retard" Smith spikes the "HUH?" factor in this slobbering in <MGqUf.16833$S25.8455@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:

"Come on, do it just have you some spiked Kool Aid."

"Didn't" your special-Ed teacher teach you how to spell, Billy?
in <OCqUf.16826$S25.10695@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"...didnt Marie teach you to play nice"

"Rhodes scholar" Billy Lardass Davies Smith blunders and blows his cover again in <Et%0g.6340$sq5.1769@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Rhode's scholar Scheissman blows his cover again."

Billy "dumbass" Smith steps on his own tiny dick when he tries to criticize others' typos,but he doesn't "perform" well as usual with his blatant "stupidity" in <oCk1g.5958$Es3.3907@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Noteed!!!!!!!!!!!!! Bwhahahahahahah. You're a brilliant one Scheissman.
You even peform stupid acts on your blatant stupidty"

Billy "dropout Lardass" Smith steps on his own dick when he tries to comment on others' spelling abilities, but he "can't" do any better in Message-ID: <mQr3g.8970$sq5.4914@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Woger cant spell very well anyway."

Billy "dropout pizza BOY" Smith fucks up his sentence again when he
blathered in <WdZfg.629$lp.259@newsread3.news.pas.earthlink.net>:
"How about those retest letter you received for jamming."

Billy "illiterate " Smith claims to have been in the Library, but he can't even spell "I've" correctly, maybe Billy should check out the English tutoring books there in WpFgg.1310$lf4.1288@newsread1.news.pas.earthlink.net>:
"Ive been to quite a few libraries on Sunday and a lot of them are open."

Billy Smith "the" ill-educated moron fucks up again in <4zxLg.15720$Qf.5115@newsread2.news.pas.earthlink.net>:
"Roger is about to finally have th final episode where..."

Billy Smith stumbles on his club foot in his fat mouth when he tries to claim "hillbillies" are somehow inferior(he squeaks from "experience"?) in <7CdRg.11366$v%4.8492@newsread1.news.pas.earthlink.net>:
"Is that another fine quality of the Hillbilly state? You know, that third world one where you live full of miscegenation, inbreeding, and the like. Speaking from experrience again?"

Learn to read:

The FCC has the authority, pursuant to §97.519(d)(2) of the rules to readminister any examination element previously administered by a volunteer examiner.

But that's right, you can't even spell "about" correctly.

Like you can spell "about," Fuckhead. Or Florida, or much else.

Billy "I can't read" Smith fucks up again when he claims in <gsJRg.2244$o71.124@newsread3.news.pas.earthlink.net>:
"By the way, weren't you required to retest per a letter from FCC enforcement bureau? Shall we post the record for all to see again? They don't make people retest unless you have been accused or proven to have committed rules violations."

Billy can't read the ARRL website which states:
NOTE: Issuance by the FCC of a Warning Notice indicates that the FCC
has what it believes to be reliable evidence of possible rules
infractions and not necessarily that the recipient has violated FCC rules. The FCC has the authority, pursuant to §97.519(d)(2) of the rules to readminister any examination element previously administered
by a volunteer examiner.

Billy "Dumbass who can't put together a sentence" Smith shows off those English skills, quite ironically in

Nope, wrong again, and how does one live with somebody deceased? I mean you still screw your deceased grandmother, the one who used to wash your tiny penis with her mouth in the bathtub.

Sure you do. You just are too stupid to realize it.

I've heard and sent in reports of your illegally getting on HF and making unidentified comments. You are too stupid to pass anything but the training wheel ham license.

For the umpteenth time, UnWiseman, I'm not Stagger Lee. I post as no one but myself. I have no idea of the color of your car, no do I care, you sociopathic mental midget.

Your wild guesses make you look very foolish.

The den of thieves in Newington, in collusion with the corrupt bureaucrats in the FCC, has N E V E R had the best interests of ham radio in mind. It was and is all about how much money the league and corrupt FCC bureaucrats can get out of the deal. The ham radio community in Hawaii wised up en masse in the mid 80s, when the ARRL refused to bulk air mail QST to Hawaii, similar to what all other publishers were doing. The league could care less that Hawaii hams were getting five month old issues of QST.
In excess of 90% of Hawaii hams quit membership in the ARRL, never to return. Cash kick-backs are a way of life for FCC bureaucratic managers.

You lived with your adoptive mother until she passed away, Roger. You still live in the house you inherited. Doesn't that make you a momma's boy?

You asked me recently if I missed my father. I told you that I miss him very much. Do you miss Marie? On the day of her death, you were Heck, Roger, you lived with your adoptive mother and didn't get kicked out. Your mother passed away and you got the house. Why would you worry about someone else living with his mother? What happened in your life to cause you to become what you are? Was it a childhood event or a piece of flawed DNA?

You can obtain mental health care, Rog. They'll counsel you, medicate you and even find you a place to live if you can't be on your own.

No damaged traces, but someone covered the exposed terminals with black electrical tape over the HDE15 knockout. The 15 pins aren't too hard, but removing the two spring loaded mounting clips is the bear. If the onboard video is bad, I'll remove it and put one of the old DE-9 filler plates over the hole.

Hey Woger: Got any new versions of the "I wasn't home when the Heils knocked on my door" story? I liked the latest version, in which only a girl friend was at your house.

Some of the other lies you've told:

1. The FCC boys were bored one day, and so they decided to retest KC8JBO. The other FCC letters he received had nothing whatsoever to do with the retest.

2. N0VFP (a) lost his job, (b) committed suicide, (c) was arrested, (d) was murdered, (e) was disowned by his parents, (f) ...

3. You published an email, allegedly by Oris Grim, except that Oris apparently couldn't even spell his own last name correctly. According to you, he spelled it "Grimm." When the error was pointed out, the misspelling was suddenly corrected, and the forgery was published again.

4. When an Ohio ham "visited" you, he was so frightened that he didn't even get out of his truck. Yeah, right.

5. The photo at http://nimbusters.com/forum/forum.php?board=10 isn't a picture of you.

6. Stagger Lee is Dave Heil.

Did you think some no-coder would meet you outside the school and beat you up if the code test is eliminated?

Not to worry, Jimmy, David Heil will protect you! :-)

David Heil served in the USAF! In a country AT war!

Poor Jimmy NEVER served, volunteered for military service nor civil government.

Why so long? Weren't there enough David Heils to handle the task right away?

So, what are YOU doing about it?

Have you Petitioned the FCC for rough, tough Test regulations?
Have you communicated with the VEC QPC? No? Are you still waiting for someone to "serve you" instead of the other way around?

>One concern many of us have about continued reductions in the license

Tsk, tsk, starting in with "guilt by association?" :-)

Gerritsen got his ham license under the EXISTING rules, Jimmy.

>If changes in the license requirements let in more like him, those of >us who are currently licensed will be harmed.

Irrational fear of the future, Jimmy?

What have you done about keeping the regulations the way they were when you were young? What, no Petitions or Kvetching the QPC?

>btw, Len, Gerritsen lived over in Bell, CA, about a half-hour from your

Ah, yes, you ARE doing the Guilt by Association thing!

BTW, Jimmy, Bell is farther away than what you say...unless one has a helicopter. :-)

>It's interesting that you proposed an age requirement that would ban

Oh, my, you should have heard me years and years ago when I was a bachelor...I was propositioning all over the place! :-) Sometimes it worked! :-)

Go get laid, Jimmy. It will improve your disposition.

>Yet the worst amateur radio offender in recent history is pretty close >to your age.

Tsk, are you proposing euthanasia or something?

"Never trust anyone over 30?"

No, not that one, you are 20 past the limit...:-)

Did you watch some old rerun of "Logan's Run" on TV?
The stars were all Brits and you love Brits...

>You can "talk" all you want, Len. Nobody is saying you shouldn't.

How magnanimous of you! :-)

>The problem is that you do not deal with disagreement well.

Whatever. :-)

>You don't >want to discuss, you want to lecture and not have your lectures >examined, criticized, or refuted.

Now now Mother Superior, I'm not trying to take away your job at the convent school and you can keep your ruler for spanking the little kiddies.

You ARE going to continue to LECTURE everyone (after telling them they are "wrong") on the Right and Proper Way of Life in everything, including history, world affairs, aerospace, and, especially, the Military!

Go ahead and continue with your "military personnel are 'subsidized' for their service." You've never served, never volunteered to serve, never took the Oath...yet you LECTURE everyone on some hilarious "why" of your words "not being insulting" (they are definitely insulting to veterans) and supposedly'correct' use of your words.

>Back on January 19, 2000, you wrote here that you were "going for Extra >right out of the box".

Yes. Well, I must have changed my mind. :-)

Did I make some kind of "solemn promise?" Swear to St. Hiram on a stack of Handbooks?

>Almost 8 years and you haven't taken the first step.

Tsk, tsk, I took the first step back in infancy. :-)

>The Technician class license has not required a code test since >February 14, 1991. Almost 16 years and you haven't taken the first

Now, now, I TOLD you I took the first step way back in time...in fact before you were conceived. :-)

>It's a pretty good bet that you're not going to get an amateur radio >license, Len.

Am I supposed to attend the Church of St. Hiram and get converted? Or are you saying I've been ex-communicated? :-)

Guess I'll have to study radio theology some more...like how one becomes a Priest of the Order of St. Hiram and promises lifelong devotion to the Church and always, always fulfilling one's "promises!"

>Why should anyone presume Len is "sane"?

Oh, my, Jimmy want a "sanity clause" in here?

Tsk, tsk, you'll have to wait for Christmas time... :-)

Act nice, "sanity" is making a list, checking it twice.

No? If I believed what you said I would have been a Val Germann.

Remember to act nice, Jimmy, "sanity clause" is coming to town in a few months.

Try not to INSULT so many military VETERANS or the military still serviing.

And, as always to you, ByteBrothers famous phrase invoked!

amusing whnen Robeson types that I am a rapist it isn't hurtfull

when he types MY fathr is rapist that is ok too

when he type My wife is male that is also no problem

child molestor nothing hurtfull there

any extra can say these thigngs about ME but if I daere QUOTE a parcular statement of an extra I " ..am only thinking about how to hurt
someone"

wwell that just isn't so

Id rather not have to remind Robeson that 2 (or more) can play that game. Id prefer civl discourse but that is impossible with someone that
has been calling you a childmolestor for some time now

if Robeson would like to avoid uch reminders he knows what to do ill remind him later

Nope.

But I may be witness to your suicide.

You've made it clear that you wish to die, so I will not intervene

You are "Wabbit", Wabbit, unless and until you ever decide to out yourself. You have no identity at all, except as the frogger/imitator of "Roger 'Woger Wabbit' Wiseman", unless you're simply lying about not being him. Your word cannot be trusted.

The two of you have made hundreds of posts today and have accomplished nothing, except to annoy everyone else. If you made the same set of posts on NIM Busters, you would have long ago been banned just like Wiseman (ab8mq), and NIM Busters is as low a web board as you can go.

You are a pair of morons who should move to another newsgroup to carry on your feud but who of course will not. Morons never think about anyone other than themselves.

You are two prima fascia reasons that the Paul Schlecks of the world will succeed with their imposition of censorship.

Thanks, Bozos.

Hey Davie, What's the make and color of Roger's car? You claim to have seen it on a "webcam", or are you going to backpedal and lie some more?

Here's some of the lies you've told:

1) There are two webcams pointed in the direction of Roger's house.

2) Eric Clapton wrote Layla for the Finnish Ex-streetwalker Assheil married after his wife left him.

3) The Marshall County, WV ARES website is the same one for the Marshall County AL ARES group.

4) Gohpher face Tunder didn't sit out in his white rustbucket truck with the engine running and phoned in to Roger via cell phone because, well, he just shit himslef and was stuck to the seat of the truck.

5) Davey ASSheil never "encounters" Roger alone.

5a) Saggytits can't prove the FCC made Roger retest because of interference, he simply can't read the Part 97 rules regarding retest procedures.

6) Saggytits Lee only uses anonyimity because he a big badass.

"webcam story" when he changes the subject with lame excuses when asked
what type of car Roger drives and it's color in

"Those newer webcams include automatic switchover to night vision mode
when it gets dark, but the pictures are in that typical blue-green

Nope! Never tangled with 'im. Got thoroughly sick of him, back in 2000, though. It doesn't matter if you're not really Wabbit, since you're not readily identifiable as anyone else, and all your morphs are lames of your "enemies", which was a Woger hallmark. Since I'm not a reg in RRAP, but in AUK, I can't possibly hope to ID you properly, either. Therefore, you are "Wabbit", until you decide to come out of your hole and be a human.

TEH WAY OF THE K00K
Never learn from your mistakes.
Always practice your mistakes; you may get them right.
Always pick on those smarter and tougher than you.
Always believe that only you know the TRVTH.
Never allow logic or reason get in the way of a good k00k.
When being overwhelmed by logic and reason: k00ksuit!
If you are going to be wrong, do it at the top of your lungs.
When caught in a lie: LIE!
When in doubt: Order the Crab Won Ton
Plagiarism is your friend. Use it.
Whenever contradicted; morph, start calling people names, and make false accusations. Include the children of your target in your allegations, even if they don't have any.
(06-Jun-05) When nobody else will listen, post to your own fan group.
(06-Jun-05) Obviously, since you have your own fan group, this must mean that you have fans. Post prolifically to your fan group - you wouldn't want to disappoint them!
(10-May-2005)Everyone reads usenet. Approval here means approval everywhere.
Post numerous blank posts, or posts containing only a message id.
Post numerous copy&paste web articles from crackerpot websites.
Never forget to call kookologists "k00ks."
If there are several, call them "sockpuppets" too
When all else fails, accuse various and sundry kookologists of e-mailing viruses to you. This is a sure-fire method of garnering sympathy and ensuring that the General Public will always see things your way. An especially effective sub-strategy here is to accuse them of infecting you with the 'Sasser' worm via e-mail.
Quote notorious scientists or writers - it makes it look as if they approve the drivel you are writing!
(9-Jul-05) Anytime your computer is infected with a virus, bogged down by spyware, attacked over your internet connection, or otherwise suffers from preventable problems, government agencies are responsible and are trying to silence you and are monitoring your computer files.
Ignore all traffic signs and feel free to trespass, you don't have to obey any rules.

Scare your enemies with lawsuits, police escorts and whines.
Always back up your empty (albeit noisy) threats with phony LARTs, false police reports, and harassing letters to the FBI and other gubbermint agencies.
Be vigilant in your redundancy. The more you repeat yourself, the more likely others will believe you!
If you can't find anyone as crazy as yourself to support you in the flamewars you start with the normal population, create sock puppets and use anonymous remailers that shamelessly hang on every word you write.
(17-Mar-05) When dealing with law enforcement, remember that it is they who have the problem, not you. Be sure to inform them of this at every available opportunity, as they will surely appreciate your constructive criticism. Be sure to make them aware that YOU KNOW YOUR RIGHTS! ("The cops like that, when people know their rights. That way they don't have to read them to you on the way to the station." - George Carlin)
The more your fake personalities adulate you, the more respect you'll get!
When confronted with a reality that you don't like: Announce loudly that you are departing, never to return as long as there's an Internet. Come back in three or four days and claim you were drunk, hacked, abducted by alience, or forged. Alternately you can just not even mention your prior departure, and if anyone asks you about it, either ignore them or respond with something along the lines of "YOUR NOT THE BOSS OF ME! PLONK!" People really know you mean business then.
Always remain clueproof.
(20-Mar-05) Anyone who does not believe that you are the reincarnation of [$DEITY_OR_PROPHET] is obviously an infidel lacking in faith whose soul in in peril of everlasting damnation.
When responding to one line challenges, post paragraphs of rants and screed in response.
Incoherency is not a roadblock to poasting.
Neither is illiteracy.
Delusions poasted often enough become fact.
Claim you will destroy for attacking you.
When spnaked, send cmsg for Fanboi newsfroup(s).
Find your Lame, Use your Lame, Be your Lame!
Post Edit when the TRVTH hurts.
Always sneck the offending newsfroups.
Always poast pictures of yourself so you can be admired in all your k00ky glory.
Always accuse others of the very acts you are guilty of.
Post lots of boasts about your high IQ and incredible talents.
(20-Mar-05) If you repeat a lie often enough, it becomes the truth. Anybody who fails to understand this is engaged in a deliberate campaign of misinformation and character assassination.
Always somebody just before replying the plonkee!
The k00k considers itself the most intelligent person in any conversation, possibly on the planet. Other people are benighted and ignorant, and have been waiting their whole lives for the k00k to rescue them from intellectual darkness.

Write a self-published book and claim it a success. Bonus points for comparing it to "Mein Kampf" and/or the Bible.
Declare yourself equal to a deity of your choice.
Claim that you've come from other planets.
Claim thousands of past lives.
Frothing complaints carry far more weight when you send them from "legal@" some domain.
Nothing strikes terror into the hearts of your detractors more than telling them that you're archiving their messages for possible use in the future.
Never forget that everyone else posting to Usenet is a paid disinformation agent looking to discredit you.
Usenet is governed by US law. If a poster in Romania killfiles you, he's obviously violating your 1st Amendment rights and can be sued.
Every news admin in the world hangs out in NANAU, and they're just dying to nuke the account of that meanyhead who just called you "fucknozzle". Drop 'em a line - that's what they're there for, after all.
AUK will be closed down. Just you wait and see.
They've nuked hundreds of accounts in the name of free speech and yours will be next.
The k00k will, without any trace of irony, lie, manipulate, impersonate, censor, and declare themselves powerful in ways ranging from the ability to have an account shut down to being God Herself, in order to convince people that they are not liars, manipulators, censors, or insane.
Abuse women while telling how many hundreds you've loved. Nevermind that you're one ugly motherfucker and that there were 30,000 femininas that thought you were a scumbag with bad teeth.
Remember that your ko0ky klaims are 'facts', and that 'facts' do not require proof.
Do not neglect to poast your responses to forums that the originator doesn't read. This will make the people in that forum very impressed with how you tear him to shreds without him being able to respond. They like it even better if you are off-topic for that forum.
Keep in mind that lack of evidence supporting your konspiracy theory actually _is_ evidence, of how effective the konspiracy is in hiding.
(06-Oct-05) When spanked, always retreat to the safety of the Ad Hominem.
(04-Aug-2005) When spanked mercilessly for days on end, proving with each poast just what an illiterate and ignorant fool you are, ALWAYS claim ownership of [person(s),froup(s)]. This works on so many levels. It inspires dread in your opponents that they will no longer be able to poast in their home froup and that they will eventually have to pay rent, to name just two.
Any problems with your poasts are the fault of the konspirators, who are trying to stop you from preventing the extinction of humanity.
Konspiracies that are able to subvert whole governments are always unable to silence konspiracy ko0ks.
The entire United States government is willing to spend millions of dollars for the sole purpose of harassing you.
Hollywood is making movies based on your personal life.

Do not consult psychiatrists or other mental health professionals. They are part of the konspiracy, and will sedate you and lock you away and keep you drugged if you tell them the truth.
Numerology and Astrology are respectable sciences and are useful for proving your case.
Everyone is Tim Hill, or David Green, or...
There is a fine line between trolling and kookery. Find that line and cross it repeatedly. When you are killfiled and/or LARTed for net.abuse as a result, claim victory. If you lose multiple accounts, this merely proves that you are indeed a world-class troll, with a black-belt in manipulation.
If you respond to every post someone else makes, they're obsessed. If they respond to less than 1% of your posts, they're even more obsessed.
Publishing people's real names, addresses, and phone numbers when there's no other way for you to come out of a flamewar with any dignity is cool, and proves that you are a master of secret internet information stores, and absolutely not to be fucked with.
Everyone is out to get you. You can put a stop to this by telling everyone that they're out to get you at every available opportunity.
You are the only sane one.
Those that give you a hard time about morally bankrupt things you yourself admit to are just persecutioners of the new inquisition.
Yelling in all caps and cursing at your detractors is debate. Your detractors laughing at you with sarcastic remarks is obvious anger and jealousy.
If doing something results in the loss of your account, legal hassles, or blunt trauma injury, do it again. It always works better the second time.
Asterisks, lots and lots of Asterisks.
Poking holes in kookscreed is stalking, and is a felony.
K00ks LOVE to "connect the dots". They are, of course, dots that only the k00k can see.

Also Sprach Dubya:

But the true threats to stability and peace are these nations that are not very transparent, that hide behind the...that don't let people in to take a look and see what they're up to. They're very kind of authoritarian regimes.
The true threat is whether or not one of these people decide, peak of anger, try to hold us hostage, ourselves; the Israelis, for example, to whom we'll defend, offer our defenses; the South Koreans.

And on 16 May 1999, the love of my life, My Precious Taelor, died in her sleep. Taelor was my third daughter and was born with severe birth defects and expected to not live past age two. I kept her for five years, eleven months, three weeks and one day. " from K4yz Bio on QRZ

frankly that sounds rather strange and vaguely sickening but after Steve instance on label other pedophiles one does have to that he listed his dead daughter (the 3rd) as the love of his life, not his current wife

Yes, that's the ticket, back to the past. As if enough people weren't abandoning ham radio already. I have never thought that code was essential. It is just another "hoop" that someone has to jump through. Once I passed the code test, I never used it again. Get real, this is 2006, and with all the innovations on the radio spectrum, code is the last thing on people's minds.

If there is ever a serious emergency, including no commercial communications, guys like you who can't build a simple transmitter and companion receiver, and can't do code, will be the first to scream for help.

What makes you think people are abandoning ham radio? I don't see that at all, but I do see a reduction in new hams. But..... What goes around will come around. Ham radio will grow again if the ARRL will quit mucking it up with their friggin yuppy, elitist attitude.

Where did you get the part that I cannot build a radio? I simply said that I do not use code anymore! I have built many radios, repaired them and use them to this day! This attitude is typical of old-timers, and I am 54 myself! How may radios have you built pal?

I agree with you on the ARRL! They are the ones who constantly keep pushing for "code" requirements to be raised! Check the figures on hams around the country. At a recent South Florida hamfest, it seemed that I was the youngest guy there!

Likely. He needed to see me at Dayton a couple of years ago, too. He had the big thread-jacking thing going on at the time calling me out to a duel or something. I didn't see him at Dayton.

Well, if that's the case, why not test them on use of the new innovations?

How about making them demonstrate competence operating five different modes of their choice? They can choose between HF SSB, VHF/UHF FM, CW, SSTV, fax, RTTY, packet, what have you. That way folks who want to learn code and might use code have an advantage, but folks who can type 130 wpm also have an advantage...

I'm relatively new to the group, but I can already tell you're the group troll.

Having been active in the rec.photo groups for sometime, I understand trolls, but at least you have a beef with something tangible.

Let's face it. You most likely are one of those who got their General at 13 WPM, maybe their Extra at 20 and hate the no coders and those who got their license by only taking code at 5WPM. Well, who cares. It's time for you to accept reality and come to the conclusion, you out lived Morse Code. Get on with life.

Jim Philopena
KB1NXE - Formerly KA1VGP, DA2PJ and WN1VJW

If you have a Call Book with that last one in it, you have definitely out live Morse Code - time to get back to ashes and dust.

At least Heil didn't consume time and resources in a useless exercise as Robesin has.

I see a lot more difference between them than that, but without getting into a great big pissing match with either of them, I'll sum it up in that one of them should be kept away from society, the other is merely annoying and needs to stick to meaningful exchanges on the air, such as "you're 59."

Doesn't matter if every newcomer sees their antics for the next eight decades in the archives, they are right, Right, RIGHT and you are wrong. Proof? W0EX/SK said he wanted to destroy the ARS since he couldn't have ham radio his way. Like Robeswine's present antics, no one said a word...

You don't get it, do you? But if you insist, many many years ago you HAD to learn Latin to attend university. Then, a few people bucked the trend and started removing the requirement to know Latin. Oh sure, the old guard resisted. Many professors refused to work without Latin as a requirement, ostensibly because they felt that the Latin requirement would demonstrate serious commitment to learning. But the world progressed and now conversational Latin is no longer required, save for a few medical and legal references.

Now, would you tell your doctor that he is not a real doctor if he can't carry on a conversation in Latin? He just might be able to, but odds are he will only know what is necessary to do his job effectively.

Scott,
I agree with you! It is organizations like ARRL who continue to insist on Code! Keep up with the times and test over what is current and actually being used. I have a restored 1940 Chrysler but I also have a 2005 PT Cruiser with A/C and all the options. I enjoy the 1940, but I would not take it on a cross-country trip.

Actually I live in a nice house I paid for.

You sound like a foul mouthed old fart who never amounted to anything in life and has to bother the snot out of people to make himself feel superior. You live by yourself because no woman would have you and all your pets would run away. You're a pitiful case that never graduated from high school. They tried to train you in the military but you were to stupid to learn to do anything so they stuck you in the kitchen peeling potatos and you've been pissed off about it every since.

Don't respond to this. I'm filtering you. I'm done with you and if I ever encounter you on the air using profanity or otherwise interfering with transmissions I'll help the FCC track you down and put you under a federal prison.

No, not at all. There is a lot less cussing, spitting, passing of gas into the mike, usually no electronic sound effects, and rarely a "10-4 good buddy." I'd say the average ham has an 80 point higher IQ, than the average Cber.

What's a "no-code ham"? All FCC-licensed radio amateurs are allowed to use Morse Code.

If FCC-licensed amateurs observe FCC regulations and follow good amateur operating practice, they are "real hams" and their QSOs are "real QSOs".

If you meant "noncodetested hams", the same criteria apply: If they observe FCC regulations and follow good amateur operating practice, they are "real hams" and their QSOs are "real QSOs".

Why wouldn't they be real?

How many newcomers actually read rrap?

How many people actually read rrap?

Anyone who bothers to wade through the mountains of postings and oceans of words on rrap will see all sorts of things from all sorts of people on all sides of various issues.

You've convinced me too, Brian.

Any doubts I had have been laid to rest.

I'm completely convinced, now.

The spoiler?

His name is Steve. His call sign is K4YZ.

His face story can be read on QRZ.com.

His heinous acts can be read in the Google archives.

You should know all about being a "porkbutt" shouldn't you fat boy? Have you been out in Bloomington handing out KKK flyers? Oh, thats right, you only have the guts to do that in towns with less than 500 people.

I will dispute that. Very little of Heil's messaging in here appears useful...except to him. It is almost entirely about demeaning lots of others. He only makes nice-nice to other pro-coders.

Hypocrisy in action.

However, Hans Brakob told the Robeswine off several times.
Hans is about the oldest tymest ham in this newsgroup, a morseman, but one who doesn't think the morse code test is necessary. Hans earned that right.

The key ingredient is always that morse code test. Anyone against it are always "wrong" but those for it are always "right"...in the pro-code-test morsemen's definition of truth, justice, and the morse way.

Fascinating. Miccolis is becoming a clone of Robesin.

Jimmy engages in some kind of weird wordplay wherein he both manipulates word meanings and loaded "questions"
so that he can come back with "you are simply wrong"
to anyone protesting/challenging/saying-an-opposite.

To further that, he feigns some kind of outrage and demands that the challenger "prove" it by going back to archives and extracting the challenger's charge.
Never mind that several hundred have already seen the old words in past messages, Jimmy MUST have those quotes in here! :-)

Jimmy never served in any military, never volunteered for anything in the military or in one of his governments. Yet, he is a self-righteous "expert" who wants to demean military that are serving (or veterans of service) with HIS "definition" of "pay," that of "being subsidized by the taxpayer." Jimmy doesn't give a shit if he insults 99.99% of everyone else, he MUST insult one who IS a veteran and who is on his enemies list. Therefore, he exhibits the same syndrome as that sick Robesin.

>> How many newcomers actually read rrap?

I see no other choice but the draconian one of simply stopping everything in the newsgroup for an indefinite period. Nobody will be able to post. Not morsemen, not no-code-test advocates, not the sociopaths, misfits, the anony-mousies in here. I've suggested it to Paul Schleck twice...but all he wants to do is engaging me in some "Personal, non-professional life" background check.

Har! Good old "show us the posting" MISDIRECTION. Everyone will be busy arguing and arguing over the OLD post and Jimmy can simply ignore the current post. :-)

Now, just WHY would some dumb sonnovasnitch try to insult about a million members of the United States military?

I don't understand that. It must be some twisted so-and-so who never volunteered for any military service and thinks
they are so much better than any service person...

>As Heil says, "Bully for you."
>The more you post, the deeper into a corner you get.

It's the Robeswine syndrome in Jimmy's posts again...going deeper and deeper and deeper until, like falling into a Black Hole, they can never get out.

I stopped by the Armed Forces Career office on the 3rd floor of the Media City Mall in Burbank, CA, today. It's next to the 3rd floor entrance to Sears at the south end of the Mall.
Nice place. Very attractive, really. Not busy today. Had a nice chat with an Army E-5 there. He got some information (on you-know-who) and we traded a few items of personal info.
He got a kick out of my miniature DD-214 photocopy. [no background check of me was necessary, Paul Schleck]

You might note that Robesin's QRZ bio has been altered. He doesn't mention his "USMC career" at all now! Wonder why? :-)

Who is "Robesin"?

It's something several people need to understand. However, those who most need to understand it are those who reject it the loudest.

Brian, you made the claim. You wrote: "Proof?"

which means you are claiming you have proof of something.

You made the claim - you back it up. Show us where the person in question:

"said he wanted to destroy the ARS since he couldn't have ham radio his way."

You said you had proof. This sort of thing is what Usenet archives are for. If he really wrote something like that, show us where he wrote it.

If you don't, or can't, why should anyone believe your claim? You've made mistakes here before, like the part about "liberal'" FDR and the Bonus Marchers, when it was really "conservative" Herbert Hoover who ordered troops to disperse them. You were wrong about FDR, maybe you're wrong about the "proof" you claimed.

Telling me "Do your own homework" is a clear indication that you don't really have any proof, and that you're misquoting a dead person.

Brian Burke, N0IMD, claimed that a now-dead person wrote something.
If the now-dead person wrote what Brian claimed, what's the problem with asking to see the original?

> who wants to demean
...
> with HIS "definition" of "pay,"
> that of "being subsidized by the taxpayer."

Why do you think the word "subsidized" is demeaning, Len?

I quoted a definition for "subsidy" from the Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary:

"a grant to a private person or company to assist an enterprise deemed advantageous to the public"

What is demeaning about that?

"subsidize" is defined in the same book as "to furnish with a subsidy"

Now of course it's clear that someone who is directly employed by the government is not "a private person or company", so the word doesn't really apply to anyone who gets a direct government paycheck.

OTOH, governments subsidize all kinds of things. Why do you think the word "subsidized" is demeaning, Len?

How would that be done, Len? Who has the authority to shut down rrap?
Obviously you do not, because you would have done it by now.

No, wait, that's not right. You don't always do what you say you are going to do.

Len, if you want rrap to go silent, why don't you lead the way?

Perhaps you want rrap to continue, because without it, you'll not be able to rant the way you have for the past decade or so.

> Nobody will be able to post. Not morsemen,

Not even you, Len.

> I've suggested it to Paul > Schleck twice...but all he wants to do is engaging

> check.

You mean he's pointed out how your behavior doesn't meet IEEE standards....

I see a contradiction, Len.

On the one hand you want rrap shut down.

On the other hand, you don't want a moderated newsgroup, and you attack the person who wants to set one up.

Sounds like you have issues with control, Len. Self-control, that is.
You realize that your postings are buried in the noise here, but on a moderated newsgroup they'd not be allowed. You'd have to control your behavior on a moderated newsgroup, and that's a problem for you.

How is it misdirection?

Brian Burke, N0IMD, claimed that a now-dead person wrote something.
If the now-dead person wrote what Brian claimed, what's the problem with asking to see the original?

btw, Len, you don't have to keep trying to convince me. I'm convinced!

Except for the fact Roger isn't Jewish, Markie. You claim to be, then before you claimed to be a Pagan. You can't get your lies straight.

Well, the argument is that you have to do _something_ to ensure that people licensed are competent operators and have some usable skills. I think the code requirement is not the best way of doing that, but it's better than nothing. The only alternative I ever seen proposed is just that, nothing.

So, I am in favor of dropping the code requirement, IF it can be replaced with something else that helps ensure licensed operators are competent and skilled.
--scott

But then, I _would_ take a 1940 Chrysler cross-country.

Oooh, a "<BITCHSLAP>". Ouch. How devastating.

BTW, asswipe - nobody's censoring anything - I simply choose not to further publish personal information without the consent of the person it belongs to -

No, Mark. Jimmie was on AOL on one of their ham radio "discussion" boards (exclusive of Usenet), sounding like the 120-year-old 1x1 superextra clone of the ARRL, parroting their phrases like he was a paid PR pro from Newington on commission. Someone apparently tipped him off on Usenet back then and he showed up in here. Same PR phrasing, same braggadoccio about amateur radio as on AOL's board, same talking-down with smug arrogance to anyone not embracing Jimmie's vision of the All-Codah Heaven (but no mention of "virgins").

The Robeswine is a relative latecomer to RRAP, but he initially came on trying to out-do Chesty Puller, USMC, but coming out more like Gomer Pyle. The Robeswine must have spent days collecting all the emotionally-loaded catch-phrases of the USMC and generally speaking like left-over sound bites from TV's JAG (now a "defunct" series).

Jimmie cries out "You have no proof!" when others don't care to re-argue and re-argue and re-argue old posts by MISDIRECTION of quoting them. It is like he desperately must "win" old arguments he never won.

The Robeswine used to do that but lost it a few years ago, preferring to directly insult his challengers...in everything from their sexual preferences to practicing pedophilia to claims of odd anti-patriotism for honoring deceased members of one's military unit. In addition, the robeswine pretended to be some kind of "authority" who could have anyone "picked up" after making a single telephone call. I'm leaving out the sick desires of his to "talk" to spouses.

>> Jimmy never served in any military, never volunteered

With Jimmie it gets WORSE in my opinion. He is so confused about "service to the country" that he doesn't hesitate to engage in sick wordplay about servicemenbers being "subsidized" by taxpayers.

How can OFFERING ONE'S LIFE be "subsidized?!?" That is implicit in EVERY military servicemember's Oath on first joining any branch. [in my day it was direct, not implicit, but I have been "told" that the exact wording has changed since then] Is that in the Oath spoken by police, firemen, paramedics, forest service rangers, jailhouse guards? I've never heard of that, but it might be so. Just the same, NO police, firemen, etc., ever have to face artillery, strafing from aircraft, salvos and torpedoes on open ocean and deliberate open warfare on land. Jimmie just doesn't understand that. He's never tried to. He READS about it and then says he "knows all about it" (and is the "expert" on it).

I don't say it will "work." I can't see any other choice.
It doesn't provide a TRUE discussion forum about policy matters now.

The newsgroup has been infected with a cancerous growth of filthy sayings by those who truly "can't play well with others." This cancer has metastasized into most threads. The newsgroup is already terminal. Parts of it have already died. It is best to just BURY it and hope for some "ressurection" much later, perhaps after the FCC makes some decision on last year's NPRM about eliminating the code test for amateur licenses.

That's a constant with Miccolis. Feigned outrage and demand to "show us the posting." Actually a good ploy to avoid answering the basic challenge. But, it is old, trite, used by many since old days of ARPANET and useless as a "reply."

I'm going to hold to what I wrote. Every military veteran I know will agree with me. If some never-serving sonnovawhich wants to argue that "subsidy" thing they can shove it.

Paul Schleck and the Waffen SS guy can go do ALL the "personal, non-professional life" background checks on me they want. They won't turn up anything heroic (no "seven hostile actions"), just doing my job(s) as best I could, following the rules, getting paid regularly, never being fired for cause.

From Jimmie Miccolis we don't have enough hints that he DOES have a "personal, non-professional life" to DO a full background check. He is proud of doing nothing at work. Hans Brakob, Phil Kane, Bill Sohl, myself have all said what we did and what we do for a living. So have others. But not Jimmie M. All we hear from Jimmie are his amateur radio adventures. He may have no other life. But, he is THE 'expert' on ALL matters, never ever hesitating to call others "wrong" when they are in disagreement with him.

Jimmie's latest, his infamous "military persons get 'SUBSIDIZED' by taxpayers" is perhaps his crowning achievement in looking down at all others. About a million 'others.' How is a LIFE 'subsidized?'

That is NOT an amateur radio subject, certainly not policy.

Plain and simple fact: It is out of line, INSULTING to anyone who is or has been in the United States military.

Miccolis won't apologize for that insult. He is always "right." QED.

That's how it goes with the robeswine, HIS words are the ONLY "facts" we can get. NO documented proof from real official sources, not even a snapshot of him in that alleged 18-year military career. Just His words.

Good old Len. Nobody but a rank greenhorn would issue a statement in morse like "you are 5-9-9". A phone op wouldn't do it at all.

You didn't get the first half right so I have doubts as to your second statement. After all, you aren't involved and aren't sitting around monitoring CW QSOs with your trusty Icom receiver.

I'll bet that most of the folks "leaving" are simply not renewing being SK. Code is in a way a dying art quite literally. Which is a shame.

We have to face it, this hobby doesn't attract a lot of new blood and the existing stock is rapidly growing older. The advantage to me is that I can find old ham equipment at estate sales for next to nothing but that's not what I'm posting about.. :)

I don't think things are all that "unfair" with the maximum code speed we currently test being 5 WPM. Of course that's what I got tested at so you can charge bias if you want. I currently don't operate CW (heck, I don't operate at all right now) but all that spectrum space in the lower part of the bands is starting to beckon. I've got a code practice program and I work on my code from time to time so maybe someday...

So where do I fall in this debate? I certainly don't favor the removal of the code requirement for all license classes. Extra's surely need to be tested at the current 5 WPM. But the fact remains that the interest in this hobby as shown by the decline in the number of licenses needs some attention.

We don't need to "dumb" down the hobby to get more folks in it, but we do need to bring the requirements into the current age. Before the advent of the personal computer 20 years ago, it would have been very expensive to set up an automated CW send and receive station, but now you can do it for next to nothing. One can actually send and receive CW without ever learning it and get transmission rates much faster than just about anybody can copy by ear, just hook up your PC to the rig load the software and voila, the no code licensee is sending and receiving at 25 WPM the day after he failed the 5 WPM test.

On the other hand, you guys that struggled to get their code speed up to 20 WPM so they could get their Extra have my respect. I understand that lowering that requirement seems like we are dumbing down the hobby, but I hope you can understand that like AM, CW is being replaced by other modes that you and your generation have pioneered.

My greatest fear is that the FCC will totally do away with code in it's testing requirements, which will logically lead to a mass spectrum reassignment to make more room for voice and we will likely loose our valuable spectrum space in the process. But once the last license goes to SK what's to stop the FCC from giving it all away?

May code never die, there are times it's the only option, but we have to keep the hobby relevant or it will all go away when the hobby dies.

So, how are things in the Waffen SS? Jimmie should be

Have you and Paul had a difficult time on my "personal, non-

Len was recently attempting to cast aspersions on my U.S. Department of State employment so it is interesting to look at the line he spouted:

On Sunday, Sept. 10, 2006 he wrote:

"Tsk, all those years in the State Department (paid for by the US taxpayer) and he picked up NOTHING on diplomacy."

and

"Tsk, and all those Department of State years and you never learning any diplomacy skills paid for by the US taxpayer..."

He didn't write that I was paid by the U.S. Government. He wrote that my years were paid for by the U.S. taxpayer.

I don't think the code require is necessarily "unfair" somehow, but it does seem awfully "arbitrary" these days. In today's world, it's just one mode of many, and a rather unpopular one at that.

> So where do I fall in this debate? I certainly don't favor the removal

If we're going to make people show a certain commitment to amateur radio before giving them advance privileges -- reasonable enough --, to me it seems that the study should be of something more people are likely to use... say, error correction coding theory, or modulator design or something. Or maybe something even more practical such as demonstrating the ability to perform link planning (antenna selection, power selection, etc.). I imagine one of the reasons CW testing remains is because it is so easy to test compared to those options.

I think I'm pretty much in agreement with you... 5 WPM is not an unreasonable barrier to entry, and I don't particular oppose keeping it around, but I do think it seems awfully arbitrary, and this refelcts somewhat poorly on hams as a group trying to present themselves as modern and professional.

Wabbit, you adopted his style, his mannerisms, and his vocabulary, so, since you have no clear identity of your own, you are he. There is no other obvious means of identifying your lameness, so you're Wiseman. If I was under the impression that CW would get through under worse conditions and/or with lower power requirements than other modes.

Does no one run "flea power" anymore?

I sometimes listen in on 10 meters but don't hear much there. A bit of CW every now and then, but not much of anything, usually. Maybe I'm listening at the wrong times? Or is it mostly vacant and just freebanders buying the 10 meter rigs?

Scott,
I took the 1940 Royal Coupe on a mini-cross country trip here in Florida, managed 60-65 with the overdrive, the original factory AM radio pulling in at least 10 states, remember those days! Got about 19-21mpg with the old flathead 6, but the 2/60 A/C wasn't really up to snuff. Once I opened the cowl vent and the vent windows turned all the way in on us, it became tolerable. Waiting for the winter months here in Florida to really enjoy the old car.

Is that like "smoking preference"? The fellow with numerous issues wrote about his sexual desires in another newsgroup. We already know what they are.

Ask Saddam Hussein. He was in the business of subsidizing the lives of bombers some years back.

You read about amateur radio and claim to know all about it. You set yourself up as an expert. Go figure.

Your blurb on artillery reminds me: That sphincter post of yours--where and when did you undergo the artillery barrage? Was your friend Gene there to confirm it? Did his sphincter tighten too?

Well, one of the nice things about code is that you don't _need_ very much bandwidth. And with modern DSP you should be able to make IF filters even narrower than my old R-390... should be possible to cram hundreds of carriers into the space of one SSB channel.

And hey, what's happening to the 500KC marine allocation? That's pretty much dead... I wonder if the ITU could be convinced to give that to the ham radio operators. Nobody else wants it.

I don't think code ever will die, but I could see a world in which it is even less relevant than it is today. That's not to say we shouldn't encourage its use.

So true, and low bandwidth helps CW get though when SSB would be impossible. However, don't forget that CW can be done quite nicely with a cheap computer, some simple cables and some free software without learning it. I suppose that one could argue that a human ear can hear what a computer can't, but I'd be willing to argue that point in favor of the computer.

I'll be willing to bet that there won't be much improvement over CW in the raw "get the message though under bad conditions" power with the new digital modes using the same bandwidth as CW. Simple is under-rated in my book.

As an operating mode CW is alive and well and likely to stay, however it will be computer driven more and more as the art dies off and new blood is not required to learn it as well as the old.

Change is neither good or bad, it's just change.

Has much to do with where we are in the sunspot cycle. A couple or three 10 meters will start to be much busier. It's my misfortune I got my upgrade

Yes that can be true. They speak of PSK as being low power but that is only low transmit power. It takes more power to generate a 25w PSK signal than a 100watt CW signal. Computers draw a lot of power.

Bad point in the sunspot cycle for 10 meters. It does open occasionally but not like it does at the peak of the sunspot cycle. Right now it is not open every day (although it may be open for a while each week). And the time of day it is open tends to be when people are working, doing errands after work, etc.

Actually, you would lose such an argument. There are many hams who have proven that they can decipher better than the computer. The computer hardware or software requires the following characteristics in the received transmission to work:

1. A strong signal
2. No distortion on the signal such as occurs from aurora, meteor scatter, etc.
3. The code sent is nearly equal in quality to that sent by a computer.
Some one using paddles may achieve that but if they are sending with a manual key or bug, that is highly unlikely.

I have frequently been able to copy better than the computer and my code skills are quite modest. The only time it beats me is when the code meets the above three criteria and is too fast for me to copy.

The Human ear.

It doesn't need batteries, can provide reliable copy when band conditions are bad, or the sender can't send well. All you need is a pencil and paper for hard copy.

It takes a little work to get good at the Ear method, but no one has ever has any problems learning it unless they're sick, lame, or Lazy.

Mark, does that mean that Heil wants to talk about 'smoking?'

I wonder why?

For my part, I only smoke DURING sex... :-)

Hey, Mark, have you heard the new technology discovery?
Electronics works on smoke! Yes, if the smoke leaks out, the electronics won't work! :-)

There's also nothing wrong with a now-living person from answering as

A serviceman or woman is not a private person. Nor are they a private company.

Do you even know what they are?

The old R-390 was designed to work with 12 KHz SSB. Cram as much as you can...:-)

Even so, at 300 Hz bandwidth per OOK CW there would be room only for 40 of them in 12 KHz bandwidth. :-)

Dee, your judgement is based solely on available "morse decoder" equipment. Hardly state-of-the-art and not optimized for anything but strong signals with little distortion. Relatively cheap equipments on the market.

One reason for not bothering with true state-of-the-art computer-aided decoding is that there isn't any ROI, no
"return on investment" of trying to make such a thing.

I have seen/heard one "intellectual exercise" by a programmer that DOES work well under distortion, weak signals, noise, etc. [there was some discussion about that in here a few years ago] That wasn't done for money-making purposes, just to see if it could be done with modern PC platforms. With a bit more work it could do quite well in terrible signal environments.

That there's so little opening in the market is understandable when you consider that NO other radio service
but amateur bothers with OOK CW for communications.
Well, not quite. The millions of keyless automotive key fobs now in use in the USA use OOK CW. But, that data rate is well above human comprehension. Some of the garage door openers and other remote 'security' transmitters also use OOK CW in a similar fashion.

Now I grant you that those key fob transmitters can't "work DX on HF with CW" but then the ham rigs can't unlock automobiles either. :-)

>I have frequently been able to copy better than the computer and my code

You mean you actually USE one of those cheap morse decoders? [tsk, tsk...] :-)

Only his last sentence is a bit vague. However, "simple" is what comprises the now-available-on-the-market decoders, all relativly cheap compared to what the COULD be.

"Undesireable" for whom? A minority of amateur radio hobbyists of today or the future of amateur radio?

Are you thinking that "the needs of the few outweigh the needs of the many?" That's not egalitarian just quite selfish.

If the FCC eliminates the manual telegraphy test from US amateur radio license testing, it will NOT take away YOUR privileges of amateur radio operation. At worst it may cause you some emotional upset. [the FCC is not concerned with the emotional mental health of citizens, just regulation of US civil radio]

Is there something "stopping" any new amateur licensee from taking up manual morse code skills now? I don't think so. There doesn't seem to be anything in last year's NPRM about "prohibition against radiotelegraphy." That NPRM only involves the manual telegraphy test for GETTING INTO amateur radio. Every single allocated mode in US amateur radio is OPTIONAL for any licensee to use within the defined scope of their license class. The only two bands where the FCC allocates ONLY "CW" is in 6 and 2 meter bands; no-code-test Technicians can use radiotelegraphy there. In fact, the FCC allocates manual radiotelegraphy on nearly EVERY amateur band, the full band not just some slices. If manual radiotelegraphy is so good-glorious-glamorous, why aren't more radio amateurs embracing it now? Just WHY do you feel compelled to argue for the retention of that manual telegraphy test and the retrograde "glamour" of it to hold back amateur radio?

Various digital modes do better under low SNR conditions than CW, but they do require a computer at both ends to perform the encoding and decoding -- some people don't like that fact, that you seemingly need "more equipment" to work such modes than you do with CW. It's a bit of a red herring, however, in that these days pretty much every single amateur radio being sold commercially has a processor (computer) in it anyway, and while some are strictly for "control" (not modulation/demodulation), the percentage that does have raw number crunching power increases every day, and within a decade it's a fair bet that over 90% of all commerical amateur radios will use DSP techniques for modulation and demodulation. (Cell phone went to DSPs somewhere between 5-10 years ago now...)

> Does no one run "flea power" anymore?

Absolutely they do, and it's a really cool part of the hobby... but for every 100 amateurs, I would guess that the number running QRP on a regular basis is about 1.

My sole experience with QRP was accidental. I had reduced power to 5 watts to tune to a different band (17 meters) and forgot to turn the power back up. As a result I found myself speaking to a Swiss ham form my southern Oklahoma shack with 5 watts and getting a reasonably good signal report. I realize that for real QRPers 5 watts is high power, but for me it was an unusual pleasure. Moreso because bad weather had me using an indoor dipole mounted on the wifes sewing room ceiling (about nine feet above the earth).

Man, do anything you can to stick around. It's going to be good, and 10M
FM is just more fun than anything. Get a PRC-8 and take lots of vitamin C.
I predict that this next peak is going to be a really good one, at least as good as '78 was.

A now-dead person isn't going to ask it.

> There's also nothing wrong with a now-living person from answering as > Heil has - "do your own homework."

Sure there is.

You claimed that a now-dead person wrote something here on rrap.

Your memory isn't perfect - in fact, you've recently been shown to be mistaken on some things.

You've been asked to back up your claim - to show where the now-dead person actually wrote what you claimed. But you either can't do that, or won't do it.

Either way, your claim must be assumed to be false until you provide some proof. Google contains all the archives.

I have seen a nonsense tactic used by both you, Brian P. Burke, N0IMD, and Leonard H. Anderson. It goes like this:

You claim someone said or did something, but provide no proof. Usually the false claim is in the form of a misquote or a misinterpretation of history. When the claim is challenged, and the correct quote or history provided, you either ignore the truth on and/or simply insult the person. Often the misquote or mistake is repeated later, and the cycle begins again.

Len does this more than you, but you've picked up on his example.
Misquoting the dead - that's pretty lame.

I don't think so, at least under most common operating conditions.

Signal to noise ratio would be important, to be sure, however with the proper application of some limited computing power I'm sure one could construct a detector that would work with seriously low SNR. It is amazing what DSP's can do now days..

> 2. No distortion on the signal such as occurs from aurora, meteor scatter,

Again, I've seen spectral displays that clearly show CW transmissions that could not be heard.

Sending code is not in question. Surely a computer is able to open and close the keying faster than a transmitter can possibly transmit.
Also, remember that the faster you key, the higher bandwidth your signal will require and the higher the SNR will theoretically need to be for it to be decoded at the receiving end.

> I have frequently been able to copy better than the computer and my code

I would contend that the software you are using is not utilizing the inputted signal at it's full potential. I've seen audio processing techniques that could pull out inaudible signals that where more complicated than CW would be.

I would also ask if you where copying random characters or where you able to "fill in the gaps" by using the context? The latter would be a very different problem for a computer to solve.

I'm saying that if you pick any digital mode, restrict the bandwidth to that of the CW signal with the same data rate, keep the SNR the same with the same error rates, CW will be about as good as you can get.
Not bad for an operating mode that has been around as long as CW.

Maybe you have some inside knowledge of the term "smoking preference" that you'd care to share with us, Len. If you go into a restaurant and the hostess asks, "Do you have a smoking preference", that she means something entirely different. What do you think she means?

It surely is. E-Look provides the following definitions:

1. [noun] meat cut from the thigh of a hog (usually smoked)
Synonyms: jambon, gammon

2. [noun] (Old Testament) son of Noah
Synonyms: Ham

3. [noun] a licensed amateur radio operator

In an amateur radio newsgroup, which definition might be used?

No fair asking for assistance!

Define "common operating conditions".

For a contester, common operating conditions often include murderous QRM.
Yet contesting is common. I've always maintained that one can construct various scenarios such that there is one where the particular mode under discussion is "the best".

For ragchewers, common operating conditions often include manually sent CW.

Yes and there are some very fine software programs already available. But even so they fail before the "EAR" fails, assuming a trained and experienced operator.

So I've seen displays of many types of signals that cannot be heard. That is an entirely different issue from distortion. When the auroras start playing, PSK (as an example) is so distorted that no matter how strong the signal, the computer cannot decipher it. If a CW signal is distorted but loud enough to hear, the human ear/brain combo can still decipher.

I''ve tested everyone I could find. I'm one of those people who gets pleasure out of trying all the new gadgets & software I can find and afford. I've also seen inaudible signals pulled out of all kinds. That's quite feasible when the bands are in good shape. Add a little thunderstorm activity, geomagnetic disturbances, solar flares, etc and the machine can't decipher them. It's not a matter of signal strength but a matter of signal quality.

Yes it is a different matter. Humans definitely have the edge on "fill in the gaps".

Ok, I understand. Actually many digital modes are, by their nature, narrower than CW already. You would have to open up the filter to get to the same bandwidth. Again the key item is quality of signal. For example, aurora induces phase shifts on PSK (phase shift keying) and makes it undecipherable. It also induces phase shifts in voice and CW. It gives the voice & CW signals a buzzy, raspy sound. Yet you can often understand voice when PSK is undecipherable. CW, when there is a phase shift, sounds like a series of buzzes but can still be copied if you are used to it.

And yes CW does a fine job and will continue to be advantageous under certain conditions.

I love it when you talk tough, Len. The money I received as base pay for my entire four years in the military totaled about 11.5 thousand dollars. I got even for that in the end. I had to "buy back" my time by paying 3% of that sum toward Federal retirement. It was a bargain.

Who is the "Waffen SS guy"?

Google provides--in spades.

You keep selling yourself short. There was the threat of the Soviet bombers. There was the classic sphincter post which recounted what it is like to undergo an artillery barrage. Where and when was it that you underwent this ordeal? Can your friend Gene confirm it? Did his sphincter tighten too?

> ...just > doing my job(s) as best I could, following the rules, getting

That's the story of most of us, Len. You have taken it upon yourself to hint that others defrauded their employers, were incompetent in what they did, never did what they've said they did or that you know better how they should have accomplished their jobs. That's strange, don't you think?

Maybe you can clarify something for me. Is it "Jimmie" or "Jimmy". You keep switching from one to the other. What kind of thing would you like from him in this amateur radio newsgroup? Why makes you feel that you're entitled to the information?

> He may have no other life.

Is that your belief, Len, or are you simply honked that he hasn't opted to share it with you. After all, there is certainly precedent for Jim to believe that you'd simply use the information to attempt belittlement
of his work or home life.

> But, he is THE

I've noticed that others are told they are wrong when they are, in fact, wrong. I've also noticed that you seem to set yourself up as an expert in areas where you have little or no experience--amateur radio, State Department communications, U.S. Navy communications, U.S. Coast Guard communications.

> Jimmie's latest, his infamous "military persons get

I happen to live in a state where a substantial portion of the residents have their lives subsidized by government/taxpayers. These subsidies include food, shelter and medical care. That doesn't mean that a crime has taken place.

> That is NOT an amateur radio subject, certainly not policy.

Drifting off into your military experiences, the war in Iraq, your PROFESSIONAL radio experiences--those things aren't amateur radio subject, but you've never let that stand in your way.

One CB can do the came in many of those case cases and yes Ham radio can cover the flanks of EMS none of which requires knowledge of Morse Code 9(except by the soon to drop license requirement)

I didn't notice any outrage, Len. You've accused a number of folks of outrage. Maybe it isn't in their writing, but in your reading.

I also didn't see any demand.

Where does the money paid to military members come from, Len? Is it from corporations or from private donors? Who pays the military?

If you're insulted, then you're insulted. I didn't feel insulted.
I knew where the money came from. It wasn't much, but I accepted it.

I think that falls under "false logic". Who is "Robesin"?

As I saw it, the "current" post was the one where Brian claimed that a dead man had written something which he did not, in fact, write. That was the MISDIRECTION.

You're a peculiar guy, Len. Do you believe that anyone who never volunteered for military service is a "twisted so-and-so" who believes that he is better than anyone who served? My observation of your behavior is that you seem to believe that being a military veteran gives you some super citizen status. I've never felt that way about my fellow citizens. My neighbor never served. His sons, ages 47 and 30 never served. I had a great-uncle who was a World War I vet. Neither of my grandfathers was old enough for that war, though one tried to enlist at sixteen. My dad served during WWII and I served in Vietnam. Neither of us ever attributed motives to those who didn't serve.

No, Lardass Davies, the 33 year old virgin (at least heterosexually) you are the expert on fucking cats (the only pussy you can get, besides your flabby right hand), since the only time you have felt a woman's cunt is your whore mommy's when sh shit you out.

"Accurate?!?" Hardly. The postings of the late Dick Carroll went on for years in snarly sarcastic tones against all no-code-test advocates, highly biased in favor of morse code.
They ARE archived in Google.

>> Jim has the memory of an elephant.

...an elephant with a HIGHLY selective memory...an elephant who insists on re-arguing and re-arguing and re-arguing OLD subjects once again...an elephant who trumpets only in morse code and wonders why other animals don't fear him.

>Is that an admission that you don't feel that your claim was correct?

Oh, my, another drop-out from Inquisition 101 class.

Do you want Brian and me "sentenced" for some awful crime against your ego and/or disrespect for your greatness?
Certainly sounds like it.

Well, since you can't make Torquemada II rank, best you try to convene a Grand Jury to "indict" someone. :-)

As always to you, the famous ByteBrothers phrase invoked.

No you are backpedaling. You said "Latin" nothing about "conversational Latin. You should really not try to lie your way out of your screw ups.
You aren't very good at it or anything else.

I believe he thinks I do, because of my anti-war stance, which makes his

It was in the form of two questions. There was no "snarly sarcastic rejoinder" at all.

Yes, you did. It's right up there at the top of this post. If you

Yes, what I wrote was accurate. It was precisely the way things took place.

I didn't hear any tones at all, Len. Are your tones snarly and sarcastic?

Your postings have gone on for over a decade. They show you to be against all pro-code test advocates and highly biased against morse code.

> They ARE archived in Google.

So Brian shouldn't have any trouble coughing one up. Your own behavior is also archived in Google. Go figure!

You actually hear Jim trumpeting? Your internet service must be somethin' super spiffy with the audio and olfactory links and all.
Let's see....Why would some old things still be argued? One of them might be that Brian Burke quoted the late Dick Carrol inaccurately.
Why does Brian keep bringing up old things?

My greatness? My greatness wasn't even under discussion.

It can't sound like it. It was even brought up.

I don't think there's any need for an indict anyone, Len. I think it is enough to demonstrate that Brian threw out a falsehood and that you supported him.

The foam duck in question is the one who thinks anyone is _bothering_ to "guess" who you are. You adopted Woger Wiseman's style, and that's enough to get you the nickname of "Wabbit". Woger was never a flamer, but he thought he was, just like you.

That might be why you find code difficult. You might ask Lloyd or Roger for some pointers on how they do CW with limp wrists.

Also, you might not want to talk into a microphone until you do something about your lisp, unless you're talking on your CB of course.

Happy to Help.

25 years? Probably about the same, since repeaters had been around at least 10 years by then. You could by a repeater over the counter with tone squelch, and several other toys built in, so they were no more complicated than a 2 meter handheld. My high school Amateur radio club built a two meter repeater of of Motorola and GE strips, homebrew powers supplies, diplexer, and timers in the late '60s. What is the big deal, unless you have multiple sites and voting receivers? We were just a bunch of RF crazy teenagers with less than $50 to spend, and we wanted to build a repeater. A few months later we were given a surplus WE Touch TOne decoder module, and added a phone patch.

Like everything else the club did, we raised the funds by repairing old electronics and selling it to buy the parts we needed for the next project. the only new piece of equipment we ever purchases was a HW-16, in kit form. BTW, CW was the least used form of communications from the club's station. they could do that at home, but we had some nice antennas, the two meter repeater, and several full coverage HF rigs.

It's Jim.

Len has a problem with names. If a person disagrees with Len, he cannot call them by the name they use. He has to calls them by a diminutive, or a made-up persona name, or their last name, or some twist on their job title, etc.

Such behavior is considered immature by grade-schoolers, but Len persists in it for some reason.

Len is the one who is outraged and insulted - by anyone who disagrees with him or proves him to be mistaken.

I don't recall that Dick wrote what Brian claims he did. Maybe Dick wrote what was claimed, maybe he didn't. I've never read every post in rrap, so I could have missed it.

OTOH, it's possible that Brian is mistaken. Showing the actual posting where Dick wrote what Brian claims would clear up the issue, but Brian and Len would rather argue about it.

> > Jimmy never served in any military, never volunteered
> > for anything in the military or in one of his > > governments.

Never claimed any of that, anyway.

But Len must beat that dead horse in every post, without explaining its significance.

Len has never been a radio amateur, has no real involvement in it, yet he insists on pontificating to us how amateur radio should be run.

> > Yet, he is a self-righteous "expert"

I've never claimed to be an expert at anything.

However, there are some areas (besides Morse Code) where my skill, knowledge and experience are more extensive than Len's. This is obviously a major source of outrage and insult to him, so he reacts in a very predictable way.

> > who wants to demean military that are serving (or > > veterans of service) with HIS "definition" of "pay,"
> > that of "being subsidized by the taxpayer."

As I wrote previously, I had no intention of insulting anyone with the use of the word "subsidize". The definition I posted isn't mine - it's Webster's. And it doesn't really apply to the case of direct government employees anyway.

I've asked both Len and Brian why they find that word insulting or demeaning, but they don't have an answer. Brian used the word "welfare" - which is quite different from "subsidy".

Some farmers receive subsidies - is it demeaning or insulting for them to do so?

Many industries receive subsidies, usually indirect, such as reduced taxation as an incentive to build new plants in certain areas. Is it demeaning or insulting for them to do so?

Some (not all) people who receive Social Security benefits are being subsidized. This happens when the benefits a person collects exceed the taxes they paid in over their working life, plus interest. Is it demeaning or insulting for them to receive those benefits?

Len attributes only bad motives to everyone who disagrees with him.

It seems to me that Len is actually very conscious of what he calls "rank-status-privilege", and very insecure about his own. If someone knows more about something than Len, he either feels demoted, demeaned and insulted, or he denigrates the knowledge as worthless. Either way, his response is easily predicted.

Everything is a one-up situation to Len - if he disagrees with you.
For example, see the classic "sphincters post", where Len responds to an account of the experiences of a military radio operator. Or the long stories about his work, his house, his scarf collection, even his long-time possession of one of the smallest Johnsons ever made.

None of those things have anything to do with amateur radio policy, but Len insists on lecturing us about them. I think he does that because his amateur radio experience is practically nil.

I'd post a definition of professional, but Len would probably be insulted.

At least Len isn't telling an alleged "USMC feldwebel" to "shut the hell up"
>
> Do you think something sinister might be afoot?

I recall Len making the claim that he could check on anyone's military service record through a database. Not all the details, of course, but enough to find out if someone had been in the military or not, and what branch(es).

At least that's what I recall.

Len has also claimed that another veteran is an "imposter", because that veteran will not provide "proof" of his claimed service.

Seems to me that if the database exists, it would be a simple matter to verify whether someone was an imposter or not. If the person wasn't in the database, Len could simply say "You're not in the database!"

> > ["signature" omitted here due to hissy fits of the > > 'moderator team' or whatever]

Len doesn't like moderated groups unless he gets to be the moderator.

He says rrap should be shut down, but he won't lead the way...

> Be proud of your IEEE association, Len. Live up to its Code of Ethics.

I wonder what other IEEE members would think of Len's behavior in rrap.
Particularly the part where he repeatedly slams another organization and accuses them of fraud, without any evidence.

Don't know about whether it saved any lives or not, but I once took a very important NOTAM (Notice to Airman) on CW from a guy in the Aleutians in the days following the 1964 quake and put it on the proper teletype circuits for him.

His airport's altitude was changing so that charts and other info were inaccurate.

I don't see any definitions in the mirror, Len. Maybe you have the one

They're hardly my definitions if they're cribbed from a web site.
Cribbing from a web site is no different than cribbing from a book.
Where did you get your definition--you know, the wrong one?

Nice strawman. The pixels form a full complete picture. Beeps are just beeps. One dimensional. That they form a recognizable pattern does not make them more. Humans are highly visual creatures. I have listened to code for years. Being able to make out a few letters does nothing for me.

It's just plain dull.

Justin's opinion is irrelevant. If it _isn't_ Ernie Primeau's personal contact info, that's even worse. Then you're harassing someone who may never even have heard of alt.baldspot, much less Farrel Manne or any of Ernie's crazy shit. Any harassment of that address which occurs because some psycho stalker finds it through Google Groups will occur because of _you_.

What a shame that we all have to agree on how to be a ham. Oh, wait -- we don't.

Effective right now, everything legal that anybody wants to do for their personal enter-ham-tainment (don't try to look it up) is OK with me.

Made Extra in 1995 and had to do 20wpm. I did it and have NEVER used CW since and have no intention to ever do so..even if "someone is dying!"
IMHO it is an outdated requirement and will/should be dropped altogether very very soon....

Don't worry, you've had the rep for at least the past six years.
Nothing's changed of late, except for Wabbit trying to use AUK to bash Mark (who won the GK because he was a fucking boring k00k, not because AUK was catering to Woger/Woger's copycat). On that note:

4. What's this newsgroup (AUK) NOT for?

This group exists for recreational Kookology, not for Very Personal
^^
Vendetta. It is not to be used for general harassment of someone, or for
^^^^^^
net abuse such as spamming and flooding and cancelbombing in an attempt to gain vengeance on someone or get the denizens of AUK to shut up.
Either way, it won't work, it's very messy, "Bob" will give you triple your money back, and you don't get a life.

Also, we [tinw] are not in the business of harassing the vulnerable or the insane. Occasionally an apparent net.kook proves to be genuinely ill. In such cases the person is disqualified from winning awards and other posters are asked to avoid exacerbating his or her problems.
Similarly, trolling or kook-hunting in support groups is strongly discouraged.

Been playing with it a little but concentrating more on the theory right now. I knew it well in Boy Scouts 25 years ago. Taking that test in 2

Code isn't hard. I was fleunt in code as a 12 year old in Boy Scouts along with most of the troop. We sent code back and forth by flashlight from tent to tent when we should have been asleep. When we got older and didn't have to go to bed at 10 o'clock we just used words.

I think SC is terribly confused about why AUK is x-poasting to his froup. It isn't "stupidity", it's kookological curiousity. RRAP is in the AUK lab, and is being cruelly poked and prodded. This process should continue for another five to ten years, or possibly longer.

LOL! Very funny. No, I x-poast wherever I will. RMCR has been of interest to AUK since you decided to use it in your "Very Personal Vendetta" (direct from the FAQ) against Ward, while at the same time outing his full name, personal contact info, and jobsite in the subject lines of your posts, in threads which you then started x-poasting to AUK on the advice of John Harrington. BTW, why'd you stop with the outing in subject lines?
Was that why Google trashed your previous JCC account?

I...see. So, to get Ward Hardman to "stop being a troll", you chose to become a troll. Dustin, Chuck, would you care to comment? Wabbit?
Marcus? Soc.fr00tz?

I have done that before. The whole AUK had fewer than five persons posting whenever I was posting. And I dearly want those five to stay.
Do you want to be one of them?

In our small county some of us do both ham & CB public service work. If I want to be fully accepted by the hams, how many and what is the proper placement of ID stickers on my car? to be accepted by the hams, my buddy suggests a minimum of 42 "Member ARRL" stickers, placed in every window of my car, along with at least three more antennas mounted on the car. He said I will make a big hit with the hams, if I place a large metal tag on the car which says, "My hobby is Amateur Radio." Do you have any more suggestions?

Doug

Hello Doug.....
The first thing you must do to be accepted by local hams is to do oral sex on the local "club's" "big shot ham".

Hams love to suck off hams of a higher license class. Now, extra class hams love to "elmer" nice young boys into this fine hobby we call amateur radio. Oh, don't forget to have a name tag along with your call. It shows a willingness to suck cock.

The headers are irrelevant. You post through Google, shift nyms constantly so you can keep posting, and use a bunch of lames of everyone who's ever kicked your arse as those nyms.

You are the group cartoon kiddie porn guy and are fun to kick around.
That's why we miss you. Unfortunately, you lost your broadband ISP twice over kiddie porn, and now you have to go to a library or to a friend's machine. Dialup access is still available everywhere, so why don't you get a Netzero account or something? You could join Woger on Earthlink or on MSN, and Steve could work on getting you booted again.

We might visit you when you're in jail. Slow Code could organize a tail gate party, and we could all party in the jail's parking lot and make fun of you. Hurry up and get that NAL, Todd, so we can party.

Dave, that sounds very suspicious considering my ground school instructor's 1962 display of a then-old Santa Barbara, CA, half-hour TTY Wx report (then required by Commerce Dept.). SBA (ID of Santa Barbara), like all other weather stations at airports, were required to post their local Wx and airport conditions every half hour. SBA is on the Pacific coast and subject to rapid variations of weather. If weather changes more rapidly than that, weather stations were required to post extra in-between-scheduled-times reports.

One day, after having fog entering and leaving SBA often, the operator of the TTY sent: "THE FOG SHE COMES IN THE FOG SHE GOES OUT." :-)

The ground school class at VNY was presented with a glassine-protected TTY copy of the Wx message that must have been old at that time (the cheap TTY paper was already turning yellow). Got a good laugh from the class.

In 1964 (which is 42 years ago), the weather stations had their own network over leased telephone lines. At least in the 48 contiguous states. Whether or not Alaska was tied in with manual telegraphy (radio or wirelines) I can't confirm...nor do I think it important since I know it was NOT via amateur bands.

NOTAMs take many shapes but back 40+ years ago, the FAA handled them and saw to their distribution at airports. Most were press-printed but some current ones were sent by TTY. That was in times before NOAA.

The answer is "yes it is a real contact" and so far as you were

To the nice people at RRAP Omega Radio (13.889 mHz?)

Could you please consider playing some of that old great German World War II Marchng Band music?

You know! That great stuff like the Horst Wessel Song and others that are easily available online via .MP3 and a Google search.

I really miss ole Walter W2YEE and his infamous hours-long 'broadcasts' on 20 and 75 Meters during the heyday of the 14.313/14.300/3.894.5 Net wars. It was a REAL TREAT to hear ole drunken Walter Barstool in there fire up with his 3-1000Z parallel 'two holer' amplifier and clear up 75 Meters for 20Kc's either side. Plus he was the only guy to ever master TRUE AM QUALITY Hi-Fi SSB on ham radio LONG before the jap ricebox makers began incorporating the same into their radios as nothing more than a clever sales gimmick!

So there you go Omega! Play that good ole goomstophher marching music and let's all GOOSE STEP around the ham shack again....!!!!

If you can get "firmware" through them, then you can get bigger things like farm tools. Amazing.

I did? You have the EXACT WORDS to that effect? Or do you just have a guilty conscience?

Tsk, I can't "fault" Miccolis on what he does for a living...he doesn't say. But he is "proud" of that.
If he no say, he no do...the only plausible interpretation.

Did I "fault" this Robeson guy for his claimed "18-year USMC career?" You are damn RIGHT I did...and will keep on doing it until the sunnuvawhich comes up with some PROOF other than a bunch of bragging shit. That twit spent less than a half year as a purchasing agent in a set-top box manufacturer and then claimed "he knew all about electronic engineering!" Buncha bullshit then and still a buncha bullshit to this day.

[did that 'tuff tawk' turn you on? :-)]

Other than yourself, who ELSE did I "fault?"

Show EXACT WORDS in the spirit of Miccolis' constant demands in here. EXACT.

Did I "fault" Jeffrey Hermann? Only in that this junior college instructor titles himself as a "mathematics lecturer." :-) He claimed (twice) that the ARRL Amateur's Handbook was on "bestseller" lists. The ABA (American Booksellers Association) has NO record of that. Jeffie-poo is a confirmed morseman and pro-code-test just like you and Miccolis. As the usual pro-coder's reaction, he got upset at any negativism about morsemanship.

Did I personally "fault" Hans Brakob? No, we DID argue on different sides of the SUBJECT. Hans isn't reticent on what he does and even supplied the name and address of his employer. We have successfully argued SUBJECTS in threads.

Did I personally "fault" Larry Kroll? Just once for his FCC 98-143 statistics report where he got me confused with a licensed radio amateur who had the same name (and middle initial) as I. Larry admitted the error and apologized, I accepted that.

Did I personally "fault" Michael Deignan? YES. Deignan had a bunch of PHONY "club calls" in Hawaii plus an "FCC licensee mailing address here. He tricked Jeffie into supplying the Hawaiian post box address. The FCC cancelled most (if not all) of his FAKE "club calls" and made him use his (real) Rhode Island mailing address. Deignan split from the newsgroup and wasn't heard but once since then. He was also a pro-code-test type.

Did I personally "fault" the 'Katapult King' (Brian Kelly)? YES. Kelly claimed over a dozen patents of HIS in this newsgroup. Turns out that Kelly had just ONE patent and is co-inventor, not sole inventor on that patent. All the others were complimentary foreign patents. My single patent would have had more foreign filings than his but I never claimed those. That and many more items Kelly exaggerated or was WRONG about in here. Kelly has been absent for months here. Kelly was (perhaps still is) a pro-code-test advocate and also sensative to any negativism about morsemanship.

Have I faulted Ed Hare personally? NO. Ed WORKS for the ARRL and I have very little respect for the ARRL or its claims to "represent" anyone but their membership to the US government. Ed is a pro-code-test advocate, probably has to be to keep his job at the ARRL. Ed is against BPL. I am against BPL. We have both argued against BPL in other venues besides here and to the FCC.

I can name a whole bunch of people who were in here who, like yourself, were only looking to demean those who didn't agree with their opinions. You conveniently blur the distinction between subject and personality in order to continue demeaning someone, anyone who doesn't agree with you.

>That's strange, don't you think?

Your actions ARE strange, but not unusual for a pro-code-test advocate. Those seem to be affected by the same "blurring" of distinction between subject and personality of a communicator when that communicator doesn't agree with them.

>> From Jimmie Miccolis we don't have enough hints that he DOES >> have a "personal, non-professional life" to DO a full back-

>
>Why, has he violated the IEEE Code of Ethics?

James Miccolis is NOT a member of the IEEE. Ergo, he cannot be EITHER adhering to or "violating" any Professional Code of Ethics of the IEEE.

>> He is proud of doing nothing at work.
>
>Why did you write the obvious untruth?

NOT an "untruth." Miccolis won't say what he does. Miccolis does say he was "proud" of what he did. Ergo, he is proud of doing nothing.

>You recounted portions of your work so many times that I'm quite certain >that some of us would be able to recite it from memory.

YOU are IN ERROR. I've not described even half of what I've done in electronics or radio engineering. That work spans over four decades of direct engineering responsibility.

>Maybe you can clarify something for me.

That's impossible. Your "clarity" is not real clarity but one of simply trying to deman, denigrate anyone who doesn't agree with your opinions on subjects.

>... After all, there is certainly precedent for Jim
>to believe that you'd simply use the information to attempt belittlement
>of his work or home life.

Again, you are IMPLYING things of some future which does not exist. Your words are couched, padded, made up with little doilies perhaps, just to demean and denigrate someone who doesn't agree with you. You do this constantly. It is an apparent "bully syndrome" you have.

>I've noticed that others are told they are wrong when they are, in fact,
>wrong.

What I've seen in THIS newsgroup is that pro-code-test advocates state THEIR opinions as "fact." When someone disagrees with those OPINIONS, the pro-coder calls them
"Wrong." Miccolis is a classic user of that "technique."

> I've also noticed that you seem to set yourself up as an expert >in areas where you have little or no experience--amateur radio, State >Department communications, U.S. Navy communications, U.S. Coast Guard
>communications.

I've never said I was an "expert" in any of those areas and you damn well know it. Your wording is again in the Heilian denigration and demeaning of anyone who disagrees with Heil. Typical Heil activity in here, trying to damn anyone disagreeing with you by stating they "have no experience."

I HAVE had experience, both in the military and much more as a civilian in communications of many kinds: USA, USN, USAF, USCG, the government of the United States in various agencies, local governments in the state of California. Of course I realize that anyone with some experience beyond amateur radio would seem like "rocket science" to those having information input only from the world of amateur radio. The ignorant can go educate themselves instead of being spoon-fed information by the League (who claims to know what is best for amateur radio).

>Drifting off into your military experiences, the war in Iraq, your >PROFESSIONAL radio experiences--those things aren't amateur radio
>subject, but you've never let that stand in your way.

YOU have, in this post, mentioned the State Department,
your military experience, or your subsidized state.
That hypocrisy is justified by your exhaulted amateur extra status? Must be so. You seem to be "permitted" yet others are not. Tsk, tsk.

I've mentioned "my" military radio experience because it involved HF, long-distance communications, and uses techniques which are still used by radio amateurs today ("boatanchor" tube radios and vacuum tube finals to reach maximum legal amateur transmitter output powers). "My" military radio experience mentioned being over a half century ago at a big Army station... and comparing that to the "boatanchor" afficionado's experience of today. Almost the SAME. A parallel.
Howaboutthat?

Jimmie Miccolis NEVER served in any military doing "radio." He never volunteered to do so, not even in the National Guard or the government (as a civilian).
Are real veterans supposed to "honor" such a person who looks down on us and demeans our service?

>> Plain and simple fact: It is out of line, INSULTING to >> anyone who is or has been in the United States military.
>
>I don't feel insulted.

Naturally. You are a morseman and an amateur extra.
Those gods of radio are above such things...

>Len Anderson has never apologized for any of his mistakes or deliberate >untruths in this venue. QED.

I am not obligated to "apologize" for someone else's
FALSE charge of either "untruth" or "falsehood."

I will and have acknowledged ACTUAL errors I have made.
Those have been few.

OPINIONS that are different from yours are NOT "errors."

>Who is "robeswine"?

"If you don't know that information, all of your latest diatribe is rather pointless."

You "unfamiliar with it?" Tsk, tsk. You can find hints of it on a search through the Internet. Educate yourself. Find out that ByteBrothers was created as the antithesis to the smug, arrogant, anal-retentive control-freaks who consider themselves
"the establishment" but who just insist on strict, unyielding

And that's a good thing. There are too many in-your-face homos trying to equate themselves to a minority group like the Vietnamese. But they aren't a true minority group, and their main intent is to try and confuse the issue in other people's minds. They engage in what are repulsive sexual habits to most of us, and we shouldn't ever feel hesitant to point that out. The word "sodomy" comes from the Old Testament, indicating that homosexual activity has been repulsive to mankind for thousands of years.

If you are "gay" (that once-innocent word has been stolen from us by the homos), keep it to your f-ing self. You don't have to march in disgusting annual parades in places like New York City and Disney World, and you don't have to put on even more disgusting displays once the parades have been completed. I stopped taking my family to Disney World after they were exposed to a disgusting stage display without any warning from the park owners. I was so highly offended that I never went back, and I'm not alone. A few years later, the Southern Baptist Church placed a boycott on Disney which remains in force to this day.

If you are a homo, keep your sexual preferences to yourself, and stay out of my face. Back in the 80's I was at a SEG convention in New Orleans, and some friends and I decided to walk to a restaurant. A gay parade appeared, seemingly out of nowhere, and one of the paraders was made up in American Indian war paint but was otherwise nude. When he ran onto the sidewalk and attempted to rub his genitals on one of my friends, my friend punched him in the mouth so hard that he knocked out one of the Indian's teeth.

I was glad to see it happen.

A cop standing nearby ignored the whole thing, and we continued to the restaurant.

To this day, I remember that incident whenever I hear a homo moaning about his "rights" in an obvious attempt to suppress my own rights.

So whenever homos get in my face, I get right back into their faces. Activist homos are a filthy, disgusting bunch who should not be given a free pass by anyone.

Jeffrey Herman claimed that the Radio Amateur's Handbook was named as an all-time best seller by Time Magazine in the non-fiction category:

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.policy/msg/4818ca633c34ccd1?hl=en&

According to the article in Time (from 1968, not 1970), it was #16:

How do you know? Just because they aren't licensed doesn't mean they can't copy CW. My officemate has no license at all but thanks to the military can probably copy better than I can.

I'm not licensed to do LOTS of things that I can do.

Many use "QSO" as a signifier of a "Voice" contact as well, so "why" couldn't you have a "QSO" with a "NO CODE" Tech? Now, if the question were a QSO with one on a band he wasn't licensed to use, then the answer "could" be NO. BUT - if he has a "Control Operator" there with him to allow his use of that band, then by all means - the answer is still "yes".

Its all in how it is looked at. Too many people split hairs.....

So it was a best seller!

Jeff noted that it was the best selling technical book on the list. I suppose that depends on whether one considers cookbooks and Dr. Spock's baby and child care books to be 'technical'.

The ARRL Radio Amateur's Handbook is certainly the best-selling book on radio on that list.

Repressed gays are like that, ya know? He'd be a lot happier if he just accepted himself as he is, and quit with the ancient faglames.

Not his trolling, his k00kery! Also, your inept attempts at net.KKKopping were a major factor. But it was mainly the k00kery. Homophobia is kooky, you see.

I didn't say I was going to "killfile" you. In fact, I neither nominated you nor seconded your nomination for the Golden Killfile -- I think I voted for you, though that was a tough field (both Tholenator and Warhol!) -- I told you you were nominated for an award that happens to have the word "killfile" in it, meaning you are worthy to be ignored by everyone, not that everyone has to killfile you. Remember, no one ever forced you to x-poast to AUK. You did that all by yourself.

Which is why it was said, for many centuries, I suppose, that it's speech that separates us from the animals. (We're a lot less visually oriented than a lot of other species.)

I have listened to Turkish for years. Being able to make out a few words does nothing for me.

But there are a lot of Turks who feel otherwise.

Your insularity is showing.

Well they love you Markie. Why do you shun their affections? I thought you liked being Bi/Gay.

By the way, How is your CW practice coming along? Up to one WPM yet?

Todd doesn't have internet, so he doesn't have an RRAP job like Markie.
He can't be making money off Omega One because the music and his language is so bad no one would dare buy advertising.

So I guess Todd's day job is to walk down to the mailbox to see if the welfare check came and to be on the lookout for the white FCC NAL van to show up. ROFL.

and host enema beer parties for the Omega One staff: Woger, Llooydie, Stevie, and Markie. Todd says his moms 8-track tape songs are good beer enema tunes!

Steve has a brain. Markie has a brain, but it doesn't work. Every time Steve or anyone else says something, Markie the parrot does a follow-up crap job on it. If Mark had something other than a mis-spelled five word phrase, maybe Steve wouldn't tease, but I haven't seen Mark get anything out right yet.

What's wrong with that, if it helps motivate people to be better hams.

No, numbers are decreasing because ham radio has been dumbed down so having a ham license isn't worth anything anymore and people are leaving.

I am wondering becaues I have been having impure thoughts about Wisman and me in the dark at night after we were drinking a lot at the Shipwreck Lounge and went back over to his place. The thoughts scare me becaues I have always liked girls and little japanese kids under 12 and lolicon art. For example I wish I could get naked with Sailor Moon who is 12 and that makes me a normal guy. So why do I get all excited thinking about Wiseman in his jokey shorts now? Mark, can you help?

Yes, that is what Time magazine claimed in 1968. But... here is MORE of what Time magazine wrote, after the title: "1926 3,800,000"

Now, in the book trade and in the newspapers, "best sellers" are listed per week or per month or per year.

The ARRL Amateur Radio Handbook began being published in the twenties. The time between 1926 and 1968 is 42 years. I didn't bother to check if this handbook was published during WW2 years. If it was not, then there are only 38 years between 1926 and 1968.

Are ALL of the Handbooks identical? I don't think so.
The AVERAGE PER YEAR publishing of the handbook comes out to 100,000 per year for 3.8 million total over 38 years (90,476 per year for 42 years). That hardly ever qualifies as a "best seller" publication.

Let's do a comparison between the ARRL Handbook and "The World Almanac and Book of Facts." I have a 2006 copy. Continuously published since 1886 (a total of 120 years), "World Almanac" claims "80 Million Copies Sold" on its 2006 cover. Now each year's Almanac WILL be different. The AVERAGE PER YEAR editions of that comes out to be 666 2/3 thousand per year. Further, "World Almanac" claims to be "#1 on the New York Times Bestsell" (also on the 2006 cover). Two-thirds of a million per year IS "best seller" qualification. Editions in the past two decades runs more to a 'Mil' per year. Perhaps more.

Is the Bible on that Time list? I don't see it. Of course that would be a contentious subject. Heretics would want it in the "fiction" category, I'm sure. :-)

But, I digress. Your chief interest seems to be in trying to destroy the credibility of a not-licensed in the amateur radio service person (although one who has been licensed as a Commercial radio operator since 1956). Have you really done that? Are you really going to nit-pick about an old posting by another and reference a 1968 Time magazine article? Yes, I'm sure you really, really WANT to do that! :-)

By the bye, how are you coming with my Background Check? You know, the one where you MUST know my "personal, non-professional life"? No neighbor has reported any "investigator" flashing their shield and wanting to speak about me. The FBI has done that before. Twice. I passed muster enough for a security clearance, Paul. Twice. Are the newsgroup standards now HIGHER than a national security clearance? Must be...!

Have you written the IEEE yet to complain about my conduct in here? No? Why not? You are free to do so. Do you think it will matter to the IEEE? If so, please explain in 30,000 words or more WHY. (that's a 'short novel' length) Be sure and tell the pro-coders about your findings. The Inquisition can't get along without you...

You really ought to search the ByteBrothers. :-)

No, I can say categorically that you are not simply wrong, you're wronger than Wrong Ronny McWrong of Wrongville on the wrongest day of his wrongful life. You're so wrong you could jolt George W. Bush into an honest moment, simply out of sheer mortification at being out-wronged. If you were any wronger, they'd have to make up a new word just to describe how wrong you are. You are just plain wrong.

So?

Did Robesin get to taste his own excrement from some other guy's lap

Self-control???

What kind of idiot posts about the taste of his own excrement from another guy's lap?

Like a Myna Bird, Mark feels as if he

An apology is all it takes, but they seem to be in short supply.

No, it wasn't. Robesin was busy accusing others of homosexuality and pedophilia. That is not peace.

Code testing is absurd. The government shouldn't be in the merit badge Guys don't have mensas. If they did, this would be called the "Women's Possible, but with more distortion (oops, he calls it compression) than he claims.

You seem to have it mostly covered, so I have only a couple more suggestions...

The power cord has to run through a hole you drilled in the firewall.
If you snag the heater core, you have to go back to CB for three more years. If you forget to use a rubber grommet and the cord shorts out, add another year.

The antennas are installed with a drill, not a magnet or a clamp. If you use a magnet mount, then drill a hole next to it for the coax cable, you're only half-way to hamdom.

If your car doesn't veer at speeds over 35mph, your antennas aren't big enough. Get the BIG Hustler coils and drill a 3/8" hole in a 16" pizza pan for higher Q. But don't use an NMO mount for this setup.

Steve has a brain. Markie has a brain, but it doesn't work. Every time Steve or anyone else says something, Markie the parrot does a follow-up crap job on it. If Mark had something other than a mis-spelled five word phrase, maybe Steve wouldn't tease, but I haven't seen Mark get anything out right yet.

Mark is, if nothing else, shameless. I understand fully why Dave Heil referred to Mark as the group "Myna Bird". For whatever it is that compels Mark to post sometimes hundreds of posts per diem, it is obvious that Mark is a total stranger to self-control. Like a Myna Bird, Mark feels as if he MUST squawk and comment often to each and every post he sees. He squawks that he is defending himself when, in reality, he is the major cause of most of the angst on RRAP. No wonder many in RRAP and elsewhere killfile him.
Yes, it WAS peaceful during Mark's hiatus. He should go away more often.

KSBD = Norton AFB They had RC-135's, wx recon.

Continuous Weather Watch would post an hourly observation, and intermediate observations as various parameters crossed their thresholds, usually an ALSTG local when conditions were stable.

Basic Weather Watch would examine the elements every 20 minutes and post intermediate observations as various parameters crossed their thresholds.

NOTAMS travelled the wx TTY circuits in the Air Force and the Army. We ripped them off and handed them to BASOPS. They posted them in the flight planning rooms.

Familiarize yourself with the words "there is certainly precedent".

I used words cribbed from a paper dictionary (since I came along well before the electronic dictionaries found online). I put them together in a sequence designed to convey what I meant to communicate. The statement I made was brief, concise and to the point.

Awwwwww. Do you feel as though I'm picking on you, Leonard?

You are feeling picked on. You're beginning to go wild with the all caps stuff. It has been my observation that Jim tells you that you are wrong when, in fact, you are incorrect, in error, wrong. What is classic is your reaction.

No, Len, I don't know it. You've known more about amateur radio than any number of long-time licensed hams. You've know more about U.S. Navy communications than Hans Brakob. You've know more about Department of State communications than me. I could go on, but you get the idea. You're a sidewalk superintendent in any number of fields. The problem is, you really don't know. You go on calling your opponent "Master Chief" or you start babbling about "cashews" or, despite the fact that you know better, talking about his MARS assignment in Vietnam. Those aren't simple mistakes. They're deliberate misstatements, meant to belittle your opponent. You're very foolish to do so because those things make you look small. You don't sway anyone by acting like that.

Everything I do is Heilian, Len. I'm Heil.

You don't have any amateur radio experience, Len. Standing over your buddy's shoulder while he operates on 40m, isn't experience.

Any number of us have had much more experience than you in any number of those areas. That hasn't stopped you from belittling the experience of others or acting as if it is an impossibility that anyone could know more or have done more than you.

No one in this newsgroup has mentioned my employment with the U.S. Department of State more than Leonard H. Anderson. Let it go, Len. You never did my job, never served in the places I served, don't know as much about State Department communications as me. Live with it. You can't win anything on this topic.

For the third time, Len, the word is "exalted". Learn it. Make it your own. Tsk, tsk.

...as far as you know. If he hasn't, so what?

I don't recall Jim asking to be honored. I don't recall him stating that he looks down upon veterans and I don't recall him demeaning the service of veterans. Aside from that, you are batting 1000.

By the way, I find myself looking down on you. It has nothing whatever to do with your veteran status.

Borat sings his new hit: "Throw the Jews Down The Well"

This is a REAL SONG by a REAL comic folks.
It's so bad it got him banned from visiting the White House!

SOON TO BE ON OMEGA ONE RADIO LSB 13.556 MHZ ???

An apology is all it takes, but they seem to be in short supply.

Yes...Mark SHOULD apologize...but won't or can't.

> Yes, it WAS peaceful during Mark's hiatus. He should go away more often.

No, it wasn't. Robesin was busy accusing others of homosexuality and pedophilia. That is not peace.

He was? I didn't see that. Steve responded to Mork...nobody else so far as I noted.
Perhaps you, like Mark, embellish just a teensy bit, eh?

When Mark places 125 posts in a matter of six hours and Steve posts six, who is the Troll?

When Mark stalks Steve day in and day out while Steve responds occasionally, is Steve the Troll?

When Mark posts cruel comments about a beloved daughter that Steve loved and lost, is Steve at fault?

If I or others make light of Mark's inability to author so much as a single, cohesive sentence, are we Trolls? Are WE cruel?

It is a fortunate thing indeed that Mark has no children...if he had they'd have been long removed from his bisexual enclave by the Michigan Department of Child Protective Services and sent to the Detroit Zoo to be prime examples of the result of unchecked inbreeding.

It is because of mentally bereft people such as Mark that abortionists will never want for customers...

How does one say mayday on CW? My radio only works on the bottom 25 KHz of the HF bands.

Please define "TLAK" so we can try to understand you. Is TLAK touching the paddles on a keyer? Is TLAK using a J38? Does TLAK mean touching that mysterious button titled CW on you radio?

Telephony has saved magnitudes more lives than CW.
If you are CW only, you are not properly equipped to even attempt to save lives.

What an obnoxious quibble. You misquote and falsely accuse Jeffrey Herman with an absolute statement. One which only a requires a simple rebuttal that:

- Shows what Jeffrey Herman really said.

- Shows convincing, third-party, evidence that supports what Jeffrey Herman really said.

You choose to "rebut" with filibuster and insult, implying that it was dumb or pedantic to even argue the point, let alone try to find the supporting evidence. Since you're apparently fond of absolute statements, here's another one:

No one else, not even your nominal "supporters" here, will post to this newsgroup and agree with you on your misquote of Jeffrey Herman. Unless, of course, you want to dig up some sock-puppets, like Avery Fineman, again.

Hmmmmmm - my how we belabor a point. MAYDAY IN CW = SOS..... SOS is usually sent in those cases. SOS for the CW and Mayday for radiotelephone.
MAYDAY is "also" asked about in some RadioTelephone license exams for "marine" use and is even becoming part of the Fire service. There is a test specifically for "Mayday" and its uses. Mayday is "generally" used in "airplane" emergencies.

I have apologized to the NG. I also have stated what it will take to stop such behavoir so go talk to Robeson

I will not allow Robeson or anyone else to sence by harrassment if that means firing back so be it

KH6O's last name is spelled "Herman". Len. One 'n'.

You also forgot the "Ph.D." which he holds.

He teaches mathematics courses at a Community College that is part of How is "mathematics lecturer" in any way inaccurate? Why should anyone "fault" him for that?

Have you ever taught mathematics at a college or university, Len?

Not exactly.

He claimed it was on a list of all-time non-fiction best selling books.
And it was!

Is that a reason to "fault" someone?

So? It wasn't an ABA best-seller list. It was a Time magazine best-seller list.

Define "morseman" for us, please. It's not in either of the Webster's "Morsemanship" isn't in those dictionaries, either.

Have you forgotten how you "faulted" him for his description of his experiences as a United States Coast Guard radio operator, Len?

Those are short-term lists of what is selling in the bookstores. The Time Magazine list was an "all-time" bestseller list.

There were special "Defense" editions published during WW2. They were used as training texts in some courses.

Neither are the other books on the Time list. Spock's "Baby And Child Care" and the cookbooks on the list have gone through many revisions.

Sure it does. Otherwise it would not have made it onto the Time list.

But how many were sold by 1968? I don't think you know, Len. You're using today's numbers and assuming the sales didn't change much. That's not a valid assumption.

Do you think the Bible is literally true, Len?

> But, I digress.

You do that all the time.

The main point is this: Jeffrey Herman, Ph. D., teaches mathematics at the college level - yet you admit you "faulted" him for referring to himself as a "mathematics lecturer". He also correctly wrote that a certain book was on an all-time bestseller list - and it was, yet you admit you "faulted" him for that, too.

Seems to me, Len, that you "fault" people for saying things that are true!

> Your chief interest seems to be in Len, you destroy your own credibilty very well....

Actually, Len, you're the one nit-picking about it.

It's really quite typical behavior for you, Len.

First, you make some claim or other, or deny someone else's.

Then someone provides conclusive evidence disproving your claim, or backing up the other person's.

Your response is to attack the messenger for telling the facts as they are.

Fits your profile perfectly.

Do you think your behavior here meets the IEEE Code of Ethics, Len?

Do you think you set a good example of what a "PROFESSIONAL" should do?

Maybe it's time to look at some of your classic "faults" aimed at a United States Coast Guard radio operator who mentioned some of his experiences here. The Coast Guard is a branch of the military, Len.

I can tell that on the air too - in CW. I can't tell it here, so I guess you'll be leaving Usenet.

Not by her words, though, which is what you're claiming. So tell me, what mood am I in at the moment? Evidently, since Usenet is a visual medium, you can tell.

Or you just don't know what you're talking about.

Blowcode can, in his small mind's imagination, do all sorts of things.

Here's a "plain and simple fact" of possible probables in case of anyone ACTUALLY dying or needing help:

1. By telephone, wired or cell: Dial 911, the universal, manned 24/7 emergency number. In turn, the 911 operator will communicate with the appropriate agency by wire or radio (there are 3 basic radio bands for public safety radio services in the USA, one more coming).
There is one cell phone for every three citizens in the USA. Speed as fast as a 911 conversation.

2. By - gasp - Citizens Band Radio Service transceivers in urban areas. CB radio users out-number amateurs by 4 to 5 to one. Considering that some radio amateurs have to work for a living and are not AT their ham radios but highway truckers are both working and with their CBs, the virtual ratio is probably double 5:1. Probability of return to first communication about help is high considering that many CB transceivers have guard receivers always tuned to the emergency channel. Speed of that is variable, may take three times longer than a conversation with a 911 operator.

3. If flying there are two basic ways to indicate help.
Overland airways routes will have ATCRBS running and a transponder "77" prefix code will generate a flag on the ATC beacon display. On civil airways, 121.5 MHz is the international universal emergency frequency (243 MHz for military radio). Speed of either is a bit longer than with 911 operator calling but quite fast.

4. On the water, in inland waterways and harbors, there is a VHF FM channel for emergencies but common in-use frequencies would get attention for real calls for help. GMDSS is available on ships over deep water as well as an HF radio voice channel for international maritime distress calls. Since maritmers are noted for adherence to SOLAS (Safety Of Life At Sea), the response would be fast.

5. On land, lacking cell coverage (rare now) but on or near highways, there is high probability that any motorist or trucker would have a CB or possibly a business vehicle with a business radio would be passing (PLMRS vehicular radios are quite common with small and large businesses). Any passing public safety agency vehicle would have a radio transceiver capable of directly contacting appropriate help. Farmers are increasing their use of private radios and might be nearby. FRS and GMRS HTs are also becoming more common for both private and business use. Speed of help calling would be variable depending on location, nearby vehicular traffic.

6. Lacking any of the above, one might look for a non-TV or non-CB antenna on a house...high probability of that belonging to a radio amateur. [such a search could take many hours, though] If the date and time corresponded to a ham contest time, the ham might not respond quickly. Even if the ham responded and began calling, there is no assurance that anyone would hear or pay attention to some emergency plea; that would violate the normal conversation that goes on in ham bands and cause much on-air disputes, further clogging calls for help. Speed of help calling is variable, anything from several minutes to many hours. Not that it matters since the victim already died after trying to get through all the ragchewing, self-styled radio police, and general cat-calling by other amateurs.

7. Blow Code is of NO help since he is not verified as a valid (or invalid) licensed radio amateur.

Ah, but a TRUE "quibble" was it not?

Tsk, tsk, you've proved what I remarked. :-)

"Falsely?" Hardly. His OLD, FORMER statement has ALREADY gone round and round in here. Dredging up OLD material only serves to show the self-righteous stubbornness of those who never got their pound-of-flesh in the first go-around. :-)

>One which only a requires a simple rebuttal that:
>
>- Shows what Jeffrey Herman really said.

"Really"? :-)

At the time, Jeffrey Herman seemed hot on trying to prove some kind of point of "absolute" goodness of the ARRL (not to mention its 'intellectualism' or whatever in matters of amateur radio). Now the ARRL does print considerable material in regards to amateur radio matters.
That publishing is their major source of income. It was a very wise choice back in the twenties...that income made it possible to fund all the "membership" wonderfulness that came later. ARRL cannot exist in its present form without that income-producing publishing.

>- Shows convincing, third-party, evidence that supports what Jeffrey > Herman really said.

Well, try as hard as I can, I just can't get my telepathy powers or crystal ball working to show what Jeffrey Herman "really" said. Really. All that I saw or anyone else saw were the words in these messages. "Really"

Now, at that OLD time of going around on that PREVIOUS message threading, Jeffrey Hermann was on of the persons higher up in the not-quite-moderation team for RRAP?
That was my understanding then. Perhaps it still is?
So, if that was the case, then some not-quite-moderators got their toes stepped on in past posting? [figure of speech about "toes"]

>You choose to "rebut" with filibuster and insult, implying that it was >dumb or pedantic to even argue the point, let alone try to find the >supporting evidence.

Tsk, it is quite obvious to most that dredging up OLD message thread subjects to re-argue and re-argue and re-argue is "dumb or pedantic," isn't it?

Not only is it dumb and pedantic, but useless effort that not only wastes others' time but takes up unneccessary memory space in archives (which already contain the OLD postings).

>No one else, not even your nominal "supporters" here, will post to this >newsgroup and agree with you on your misquote of Jeffrey Herman.

Irrelevant, Paul. I am myself and I am secure enough to let my postings stand on their own. I don't need a "supporter." :-) I can see that a lot of what I post consists of OPINIONS which are shared by others.

I "misquoted" Jeffrey Hermann? Hermann is a pro-code-test advocate and a strong supporter of the ARRL. That's not a "misquote" is it? Did I get some "year of best-sellers" wrong? Perhaps. I'm not one to trumpet some old publishing industry PR about "best-sellers." Even so, year 1968 is 38 years ago, hardly relevant to today (year 2006).

If you wish to "discuss" best-seller listings, that is quite another subject...which is NOT an amateur radio policy subject, per se. Please advise on the proper newsgroup to discuss publishing PR bullstuff and I might take it there.

>Unless, of course, you want to dig up some sock-puppets, like Avery >Fineman, again.

"Sock puppet?" :-) Hardly. "Avery Fineman" was an old pseuodym I used back in BBS days, before the Internet went public in 1991. I've admitted to that in public in here.
It is a play on words, a mild amusement...except to the anal-retentive, easily-furious, overly-touchy we-must-have-

ONLY-our-way individuals. :-)

Interesting (at least to me) that you devote SO MUCH time and so many words into attempting to chastise me. Flattering, perhaps, but I have no need of that. I see a much more serious concern in an obvious LACK of trying to clean up the obnoxious, anonymous postings of real filth and personal accusations thrown on our screens by OTHERS. Isn't clean-up of such filth the real JOB of the "moderators" and the newsgroup police?
I guess not.

"Peers?" :-)

I have only a Commercial radio operator license, not an amateur radio one. I've been involved and experienced in radio communications since 1953. There are about three quarter million US amateur radio licenses granted but there are about 300 million US citizens. I am in the latter group. How can you say "my peers?"

"You are sure?" Oh, yes, you know what someone "really" said. Forgive me. I doubted your telesensory powers. I am only mortal and therefore with Original Sin. I have no prescient powers, only normal observation and deduction to see the obvious getting-the-stake-together-for-burning-the-heretics activities on-going.

Now, it is perfectly obvious that Heil, and your pickup on that about the "IEEE Code of Ethics" was a beginning ploy to engage in verbal "chastisement" of myself. :-) Both of you wanted something, however slight, in order to imply some near-felonious misconduct on me...for using the IEEE free e-mail alias forwarding service as my ID on Google. No telesensory powers needed there. Just observation and obvious deduction...on something that is just an Internet address re-direction. The ARRL provides this service to its members. Should I counter by providing the ARRL much-publicized "Amateur Code" in the same manner?

I'm just asking some questions here, Paul, trying to get clarification on what is permissible under the to-be "moderation" to happen. The to-be rules seem to be fleeting, changing direction, having individuals re-defined as to "(mis)conduct". It is difficult to keep up. Obvious filth and perversion is being posted in here daily by others, yet you go on and on about a Professional Association in an AMATEUR radio newsgroup. Confusing.

Of course you didn't see it. Of course you think I embellish just a teensy bit. Of course you think Mark should apologize. Of course you think it was peaceful when Mark took leave.

You are Robesin.

I've corrected the above so the attributions are right, so quit screwing it up.
